PROCEEDINGS OF THE GATHERING OF 1930

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 3 P. M.

The Society was called to order in the Gridiron Room of the Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., by the Chieftain, Rev. James Mitchell Magruder, D. D., announcing the twenty-first annual gathering of the American Clan Gregor Society. Invocation was by the Chaplain of the Society, Rev. Enoch Magruder Thompson.

The report of the Scribe, Robert Lee Magruder, Jr., pointed out that minutes of the 1929 gathering had been published in the Year Book of the Society. He stressed that our address list of members was incorrect, owing to failure of members to notify of changes in address. He announced that only two bible records had been submitted during the year and urged the importance of members sending in certified copies of such record for preservation in the year book. He urged the members to renew interest in the organization by attendance at the annual gatherings and securing new members, together with furnishing items of general interest relative to families of Clan members.

The report of the Registrar, Mrs. O. O. Van den Berg, showed that only four new members had become affiliated with the Society during the year, namely:

- 675 Mrs. Gertrude Berry Patterson, 322 W. Center St., Fostoria, Ohio.
- 676 Miss Mary Adelaide Jenkins, Hunting Ridge, Edmondson and Swan Ave., Baltimore, Md.
- 678 Mrs. Wilson B. Davis (Jennie L. Embry) 944 Green St., Augusta, Ga.
- 679 Mrs. Joseph F. Bartoli (Addie Lou Davis) 125 East 106th St., New York, N. Y.

The Registrar announced with regret that the applications of Dr. Henry Allan Gleason, of New York City, and Mr. and Mrs. George Brick Smith, of Newport News, Va., were of necessity refused, owing to lack of data. Each of these applicants would add much to the personnel of our Society and it is hoped the missing information will be found.

Mrs. Van den Berg further stated that she had purchased a bolt of ribbon in the MacGregor plaid, from which to cut badges for new members.

The report of the Historian, Miss Mary Therese Hill, showed the following deaths:

Following the various reports, a paper, "Mary Ann Gray Silver," prepared by her son, Gray Silver, Deputy Chieftain for West Virginia, was read by Mr. E. H. DeJarnette.

A paper "A List of Descendants of William Hezekiah Nathaniel Magruder, with extract from letter of his son Nathaniel Hawkins Magruder" prepared by Miss Mary Harrelson Magruder, was read by Rev. James Mitchell Magruder.

With benediction by the Chaplain, the afternoon session was adjourned.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 8:00 P. M.

The Society convened in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel, with invocation by the Chaplain, following which the Chieftain read his annual address.

Memorial sketches of deceased members were read by Mrs. William Wolfe Smith.

Mr. Henry Magruder Taylor read a paper which he had prepared on "The Peninsular Campaign of General John Bankhead Magruder."

An interesting event of the evening's program was the address by the Rev. Robert Johnston, D. D., DCL., Rector of St. John's Church, Washington, D. C., his subject being "Scottish Humor."

Mr. John Francis M. Bowie sang "MacGregor's Gathering" and other selections, accompanied on the piano by Mr. George Wilson.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 11:30 A. M.

The Society gathered at Saint Paul's Church (Baden), Prince George's County, Maryland, for dedication of a tablet to the memory of the Magruder's who served on the Vestry of St. Paul's Church from 1692 to 1799, the dedication being made by the Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, D. D., Bishop of Maryland.

The Rev. Enoch Magruder Thompson, Chaplain of the American Clan Gregor Society, was Master of Ceremonies, assisted by Rev. James Mitchell Magruder, D. D., Chieftain of the Society, Rev. Charles E. Crusoe, D. D., Rector, and Rev. F. P. Willes, of Croome, Maryland.

The tablet was unveiled by William Howard Magruder, fifth of the name in direct descent and ninth in descent from Alexander Magruder, the immigrant ancestor.

Following the dedication ceremonies the ladies of Saint Paul's Guild served a fish dinner in the Parish House and distributed to the visitors a photograph of the interior of this interesting and historical church as a souvenir of the visit of the American Clan Gregor Society.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 8:00 P. M.

The Society met in the Fairfax Room of the Willard Hotel. An excellent musical program sponsored by Mr. Andrew Paterson and Mr.

Daniel Duff, with pipes played by Mr. Garrioch, was received most cordially. Miss Dowland, in costume, gave several Scottish dances.

"Extracts from some letters written by Magruder's in Mississippi and Arkansas during the late Fifties," prepared by Miss Helen Wolfe, Deputy Chieftain for the District of Columbia, was read by Mr. John Edwin Muncaster.

A paper, "A Maryland Exodus to Mississippi in 1808," written by Mrs. Nellie Wailes Brandon, was read by Rev. James M. Magruder.

The Chieftain, Rev. James M. Magruder, appointed William Pinkney Magruder, chairman of the nominating committee, together with Dr. Robert E. Ferneyhough and Mrs. Horatio Erskine Magruder. Objection was raised from the floor, but on motion made by Mr. Clement W. Sheriff, duly seconded, the appointment of a nominating committee was approved by the Society.

The Chairman of the committee on nominations submitted report of that committee as follows:

For Chieftain	REV. JAMES MITCHELL MAGRUDER, D. D.

An election was held for the office of Chieftain, since two names were proposed for this office. A tally of the ballots showed Egbert Watson Magruder had been elected to that position for the ensuing year.

On motion, duly seconded, the Scribe was authorized to cast the unanimous vote of the Society for the remaining officers named by the nominating committee.

The Rev. James Mitchell in retiring from office as Chieftain thanked the Society for the honor bestowed upon him, and Egbert Watson Magruder, with appropriate remarks, accepted the position of Chieftain, for 1930-1931.

The newly elected Chieftain announced his appointments of officers and committees for 1930-1931.

Rev. Enoch Magruder Thompson, Chaplain, pronounced the benediction, whereupon the 1929 Gathering of the American Clan Gregor Society was adjourned.

DESCENDANTS OF MAGRUDER REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS
FROM MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MARYLAND

BY KENNETH DANN MAGRUDER, PENNSYLVANIA

Samuel Brewer Magruder⁵ (Samuel 3rd,⁴ Ninian,³ Samuel,² Alexander¹) was born in Prince George's County, Maryland, October 14, 1744; died in Montgomery County, Maryland, 1818; married 1st. Rebecca Magruder, born in Prince George's County, Maryland, 1746, buried in Montgomery County, Maryland, December 27, 1806; married 2nd. in Montgomery County, Maryland, March 21, 1808, Eleanor Warren, born ca. 1761, buried in Montgomery County, Maryland, November 16, 1821, no issue.

Samuel Brewer Magruder was private, 4th Co., 29th Battalion, Montgomery County, Maryland, Col. John Murdock commanding, August 29, 1777; promoted to ensign, September 2, 1777; saw active service with the "Marching Militia" in 1777-1778; subscribed to the "Patriots' Oath" in Montgomery County, Maryland, 1778; and was promoted to first lieutenant, July 1, 1780.

Children of Samuel Brewer Magruder and Rebecca Magruder:

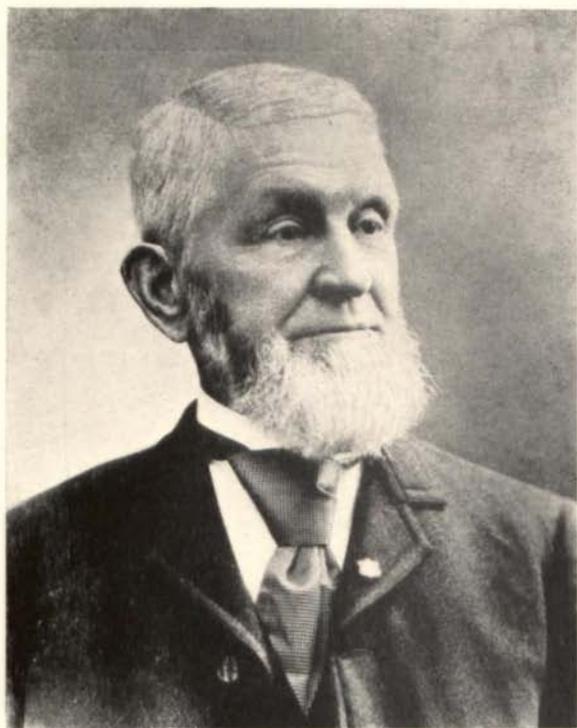

1. James Magruder, born in Frederick (now in Montgomery) County, Maryland, 1768.
2. Charlotte Magruder, born in Frederick (now in Montgomery) County, Maryland, 1770; died in Montgomery County, Maryland, 1826; married Kinsey Beall, born in Frederick County, Maryland, died in Montgomery County, Maryland, 1820.
3. Ninian Magruder, born in Frederick (now in Montgomery) County, Maryland, July 1, 1772; died at Magruder's Mills, Frederick (now in Clarke) County, between Ashby's and Snicker's Gaps, Virginia, June 13, 1830; married in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Prince George's (now Rock Creek) Parish, District of Columbia, February 5, 1795, by Rev. Thomas Reade

*The index system applied to the tabulation of descendants, corresponds to the plan recommended as most advantageous by the Institute of American Genealogy. The children of Samuel Brewer Magruder are numbered 1, 2, 3, etc. As each successive generation of descendants is recorded, 1, 2, 3, etc., are added to the index numbers used for the preceding generation. Thus, Josephus Beall as third son of Charlotte (Magruder) Beall is given her index number, 2, to which is added 3, making 23. Children of Josephus are 231, 232, 233, and so the numbers grow with each new generation. When there are more than ten children, confusion would result if 2311, etc., were used. In such cases, the numbers read 23:11, and with the next generation 23:11:1, 23:11:2, 23:11:3, etc. The first wife or husband of a descendant has that descendant's number plus the letter a; thus, 232-a. A second wife or husband would be 232-b. If the second wife or husband had married someone else earlier, the latter would be 232-b-a.

- to Grace Townsend (3-a), born September 22, 1779, died in Paris, Virginia, November 17, 1813; married 2nd. Elizabeth Lyons (3-b), daughter of James Lyons and Mary Neuhouse, by Rev. NOTES AND QUERIES

(A limited space is given to Notes, which should prove of interest to our membership; and to Queries, which it is hoped some of our membership will answer. These items should be made as brief as possible and addressed to the Editor.)

Second Lieutenant Nathaniel Beall Magruder and Private Norman Bruce Magruder were the only Magruders pensioned by the Federal Government for services during the Revolutionary War, and no Magruders received Bounty Land from the Federal Government for services therein.

They were sons of Zachariah Magruder (Samuel,³ Samuel,² Alexander¹), and their names appear upon the bronze tablet in the Montgomery County, Maryland, Courthouse, placed by A. C. G. S. in 1926, as a memorial to the Magruders who served during the Revolutionary War from that County.

GENERAL JOHN BANKHEAD MAGRUDER, C. S. A., IN THE PENINSULAR CAMPAIGN, MARCH-JULY, 1862

BY HENRY MAGRUDER TAYLOR, VIRGINIA

A biographical sketch of General Magruder has already been presented to this Society, and published in the Year Book of 1927, therefore this paper will discuss only his part in the famous Peninsular Campaign of 1862.

After a winter spent in preparation for an advance against Richmond, General Geo. B. McClellan, the Federal Commander, finally received President Lincoln's consent to carry out his plans for an attack on Richmond, via the York and James Rivers. The order for this movement was signed March 8, 1862.

General Joseph E. Johnston, who was in command of the Confederate forces in Northern Virginia, had his headquarters at Centerville during the winter of 1861-62, where he harassed the Washington defenses. Considering his position too advanced and open to an attack on his right, on March 7th, General Johnston withdrew to the south of the Rappahannock River, where he could better protect Richmond from attack from any direction the Federals might decide to advance.

General John Bankhead Magruder, with a small force, had been on the lower Peninsula watching the Federal forces located at Fortress Monroe. Realizing that an advance might be made up the Peninsula by way of Yorktown and Williamsburg, he made a thorough study of the country, and laid out three lines of defense. By March 1st these defenses had been partially completed by the construction of entrenchments, forts and dams. The real line of defense was seven miles below Yorktown at that point between where the setting back of the Poquosin River from the York, and the mouths of the Warwick and Deep Creek on the James, contract the intervening solid ground to the short distance of three miles. "Both flanks of this line," reported General Magruder, "were defended by boggy and difficult streams and swamps. In addition, the left flank was defended by elaborate fortifications at Ship Point, connected by a broken line of redoubts crossing the heads of the narrow ravines. In my opinion, this advanced line with its flank defenses might have been held with 20,000 troops. With 25,000 I do not believe it could have been broken by any force the enemy could have brought against it." When his force was reduced by transfer of detachments to Suffolk and Portsmouth, General Magruder abandoned his advanced line about March 1st, and fell back to his second line running from Yorktown on his left along the Warwick River to Mulberry Island, and the James upon the right. The third line was constructed in front of Williamsburg, eleven miles farther up the Peninsula, and proved of great value later in the campaign.

Full advantage was taken of the many natural obstacles which this country afforded, and three dams were added to the two mill dams already existing along the line, these dams had the effect of backing up the water, and rendering its passage impracticable for either artillery or infantry, for nearly three-fourths of the front of twelve miles.

General McClellan landed at Fortress Monroe on April 2nd, and immediately started the advance with about 58,000 troops, which General Magruder opposed with only 11,000. The Federal General was surprised when his troops were stopped April 5th by the Confederate defenses, and he was led to greatly overestimate their strength as a result of the plans of General Magruder, who reported, "Deeming it of vital importance to hold Yorktown on York River and Mulberry Island on James River, until the authorities might take such steps as should be deemed necessary to meet a serious advance of the enemy on the Peninsula, I felt compelled to dispose my forces in such a manner as to accomplish these objects with the least risk possible, under the circumstances of great hazard which surrounded the little army I commanded."

Learning that McDowell's corps had been detained in Washington, and, therefore, would not be available for flanking Yorktown as he had planned, General McClellan prepared to lay siege to that place rather than attempt to break through the Confederate lines, which he believed very strongly held as a result of General Magruder's activity and show of strength.

Just as the Federals were ready to begin the bombardment with their heavy guns, the Confederates quietly withdrew from Yorktown on May 5th. McClellan had been delayed fully a month by General Magruder's brilliant defense, and the Confederate Government gained this greatly needed time to collect troops for the defense of Richmond. Colonel Henderson, in his Stonewall Jackson, says, "Magruder's bold stand was of infinite service to the Confederate cause."

General Johnston assumed command of the Confederate forces on the Peninsula about April 14th, and directed the withdrawal up the Peninsula. The Battle of Williamsburg, which was the result of the Federal efforts to stop the Confederate movement, failed to delay the orderly retreat, and in this battle the Confederates used, to great advantage, the third line of defenses which General Magruder had constructed. Some of these fortifications are still in existence.

During the Battle of Seven Pines General Magruder commanded the division on the left center while General Longstreet and D. H. Hill made the attack on the Federal troops on the south side of the Chickahominy River.

When General Robert E. Lee assumed command following the Battle of Seven Pines, after Johnston was wounded, the Confederate army consisted of seven Divisions, one of which was commanded by General Magruder consisting of six Brigades. General Lee's bold plan of turning McClellan right with Jackson's corps, gave the most important mission of defending Richmond from a direct attack to General Magruder. Of this assignment Col. Henderson says, "Magruder, the same officer who so successfully imposed upon McClellan at Yorktown, was such a master of artifice that with 28,000 men and the reserve artillery, he might be relied upon to hold Richmond until Porter had been disposed of." Concerning the mission that had been given him of holding the Federal army which Lee and Jackson with most of the Confederate forces were attacking and attempting to turn, General Magruder says, "I received instructions enjoining the utmost vigilance. I passed the night without sleep. Had McClellan massed his whole force in column and advanced it against any point in our line of battle, though the head of his column would have suffered greatly, its momentum would have insured him success and the occupation of our works about Richmond, and, consequently, possession of the city might have been his reward." General A. S. Webb, of the Federal army, in his account of the Peninsular campaign, makes this statement concerning General Magruder's part in the battle, "While the battle of Gaines's Mill was in progress, the enemy's force—25,000 strong—under Magruder, by a succession of feints, advanced along different portions of the Union line south of the Chickahominy. Furious outbursts of artillery fire, and a resort to every device known which could lead to the belief that an attack in force was imminent, so engaged the Union Generals that when they were appealed to for reinforcements for Porter, General Franklin answered, "I do not think it prudent to send any more troops from here at present."

After the victory of Gaines's Mill General Lee for several days was undecided in which direction McClellan would retreat, and General Magruder and Huger, who were directed to watch the enemy in their front and report any signs of movement, have been much criticised for their failure to discover McClellan's retreat earlier. General Sir Frederick Maurice makes the following statement in his recent edition of Colonel Charles Marshall's papers: "This criticism must now be tempered by the knowledge acquired during the World War of the ease with which troops can be withdrawn unobserved from behind entrenchments."

General Lee immediately ordered a vigorous pursuit of the retreating Federals. General Magruder came upon the rear guard of the enemy near Savage Station. He mistook the resistance that he met for a renewal of the enemy's movement against Richmond, and, therefore, sent to Huger on his right for reinforcements which, according to Colonel Marshall, delayed the pursuit and resulted in General Lee that night writing General Magruder as follows: "General, I much regret that you have made so little progress today in the pursuit of the enemy. In order to reap the fruits of our victory the pursuit should be most vigorous. I must urge you, then, again to press on his rear, rapidly and steadily. We must lose no more time or he will escape us entirely." General Sir Maurice in explanation, says, that Magruder, who expected Jackson to come upon his left flank, only attacked with two brigades and two battalions of another, against Sumner's army corps and was naturally repulsed.

At the Battles of White Oak Swamp and Frayzer's Farm, General Magruder's force did not take an active part, as he could not get into position in time, due to difficulty in traversing the country in his front, which was heavily wooded and without adequate roads.

When McClellan succeeded in retiring to Malvern Hill, General Lee ordered a general attack upon this strong position. General Magruder was on the right, and his men made the most famous charge of that terrible day, according to Webb, who says, "As Magruder got his men in place, the fire from our batteries was intense. His plan was to put 15,000 men in line and charge the batteries and supporting infantry, to follow up success with fresh troops, and, if repulsed, to hold the line where he then was on the hill. His caution as to repulse was one that did credit to his military sagacity, and was fully justified by events." His men advanced bravely all along the line, but recoiled from the terrible rain of missiles from the heavy guns located both on the hill and on the gunboats in the river. The Confederate losses were so great that they were forced to give up the attempt to destroy McClellan's army, but during the night the Federals retired down the river to Harrison's Landing. Thus ended the great advance on Richmond.

Upon the reorganization of the Confederate forces General Magruder was transferred to Texas, where he continued the brilliant military record, and added additional fame to his name. This part of his life could well be the subject of another paper.

A MARYLAND EXODUS

BY NELLIE WAILES BRANDON, MISSISSIPPI

A chance remark between two motorists purring along a highway of sufficiently recent construction to carry a lingering regret for the destruction of the picturesqueness of the ancient roadway, led to an interesting train of thought, and while their car traveled along in the leisurely way suitable to a couple midway between the vanishing and the coming generation, their minds traveled back to a time when this community was full of the charm of the old-time social life. This was the "Maryland settlement in Mississippi" beginning in Adams County, running through Jefferson and into Claiborne.

The pilot of the car turned to his companion and said, "Just why was it that so many Maryland people came to this especial locality?" We had never thought before to inquire. It was a fact accepted without investigation, but it might make a fascinating tour through the past to seek for the answer.

What makes an exodus of any sort? Either unsatisfactory conditions at the source, or the promise and lure of some great advantage at the end. It requires a degree of courage and determination to turn one's back upon an environment of settled and familiar conditions, family connections and tried friends, and face new and strange demands for which we have had no experience to fit us. What was this appeal that could tempt so many (largely from southern Prince George's) to make so great a sacrifice as was necessary to reach so distant a spot in Mississippi, and cast their lot in a new country, from which, few, if any, ever revisited their native State? Was it that Maryland's staple crop, tobacco, had reached so low an ebb that some radical change was necessary, or that Mississippi's staple crop, cotton, offered such glowing prospects? In search for the answer reference has been had to some old correspondence, which, if it does not entirely solve the problem, gives us many interesting and instructive glimpses of the life of the times, of courage, character and resource, and serves to make those of us who are in the habit of dwelling on the "good old times" wonder if we of the present are building on so sure a foundation as those sturdy old forebears, and if we are being true to the trust they left us.

In the migration to Mississippi was a large contingent of Magruders, and we cannot but feel that the new country was the better for their having passed this way. Whatever the motive, some came and others followed. They seem to have mostly pursued the same route, by land to Hagerstown, Md., Hancock Town, Pittsburg and Wheeling, seeking the Ohio River, sometimes arriving to find the water so low as to necessitate the alternative of an entire land trip through what was practically a trackless forest—without roads or bridges, and few, if any, ferries, and with the menace of Indians added to the handicaps of nature.

Some excerpts from this old correspondence will tell the tale in part, and leave us filled with regret that so little has survived. Early in the exodus came James Trueman Magruder, previously a sea captain, and the master of a merchant vessel plying between Philadelphia and London. His brother, Hazekiah Bussey Magruder, was also a sea captain, commanding a vessel called the New Industry, and both had trained many of the younger generation in navigation. What could have tempted this seafaring man, Jas. T. Magruder, to resign his life's vocation and join the first of Maryland's emigrants to Mississippi? A tradition says that he came in his sailing vessel to New Orleans, where he disposed of the boat. He lived in Washington, then the capitol of Mississippi Territory, for a couple of years before going ten miles further into Jefferson County, where he purchased a plantation which he called Mount Ararat, and settled down to till the soil. However this may be, we find from letters of Leonard Covington that James Trueman Magruder, Jr., came by land with his cousin, Alexander Covington, in 1808. But let us leave off guessing and quote from these old letters.

Aquasco, Md., May 2nd 1808.

Dear Brother

Your three highly acceptable and esteemed favors from Red Stone Fort, Pittsburg and Marietta all reached me by last mail and their contents have afforded us unspeakable satisfaction. The celerity of your movements has astonished as well as gratified us. It bespeaks, with the blessing of God, a speeding termination to your arduous undertaking, and we fondly flatter ourselves that you will reach your destination at farthest by the last of this month, and that the Almighty Ruler of destinies may safely bring you to the land of health, peace and plenty, shall be the ardent prayer of

Your affectionate brother

Leonard Covington.

P. S.

I have been not a little surprised and hurt at the conduct of your man Phil, and think you were particularly fortunate in his so speedy recovery. But for this untoward circumstance and the probable less incurred in the elopement of your little pony, your disbursements would have been as reasonable, as you journey facile and expeditious."

Aquasco Md. Aug. 7th 1808

to

Jas. T. Magruder [his uncle].

I tender your my most sincere acknowledgements for your friendly favor of June 22nd, which has just come to hand, together with that of my brother [Alex Covington] of the 30th of the same month.

I am sorry that the prices and titles of land seem for the present in some measure to obstruct your plans, but it appears to me that your time cannot be illy spent under your present arrangement, and possibly a purchase of lands under existing circumstances could not be made to so great advantage as when the public office for the sale of lands shall be established, and as when the political horizon shall have been cleared of its present gloomy bodements. You mention that cash is scarce and cannot be had for produce (cotton). I should think that this consideration alone would decide the preference in favor of your present plan of hiring your negroes, to that of cultivating the soil at your own expense and risk, if indeed the wages for hirelings are regularly and promptly paid up (but of this neither of you have given particulars) and if the treatments in all respects of the slaves are such as we ought to wish for. Indeed I am extremely anxious to be informed of all these particular matters, and to have your full opinion and advice as to the propriety of my removing to that country, for I seriously assure you (though I know you will be startled at the assurance) that I am at this moment earnestly employed in making arrangements to that end.

I am now negotiating for the sale of the whole of my Calvert lands with a full view to an investment and settlement in your country. Our friend Rawlings and myself have certainly got our affairs in such a train that I really think it probable that we shall set out this fall and winter through lower Kentucky, but possibly may be delayed until the following spring. I will briefly give you the reasons which have moved me to the desire and resolution above advised you of, and again repeat my request that you will both favor me with your opinion and advice. In the first place I find it will be extremely difficult if not impossible, for me to meet all my pecuniary obligations and to sink the debt incurred for the purchase of my lands. The interest upon five or six thousand dollars under our present and apparent future commercial embarrassments, is really of itself not a slight matter, when no other means are to be found for its extinction than the uncertain and fluctuating one of a tobacco crop, which I verily believe has seen very much its best days. Add to this consideration the little chance I should have of adding to my property with my present prospect of a growing and large family, which must necessarily begin to be very expensive; and again, should a war with Great Britain terminate our present political disputes with that nation, I cannot but dread their predatory incursions which their naval superiority could enable them to make, when my little all would be entirely exposed to their merciless depredations; and lastly, the negroes which I contemplate to take with me, amounting to 25, out of which 19 may be hired and worked to advantage, at the price you have hired yours at, will be infinitely more productive than all my estate here put together.

Should I not be deceived in my expectations of compassing about $3,000, and your advice will bear me out in it. I have it in contemplation to carry out with me some ten or fifteen families who are urgent in their requests for me to enlist them in my service of clearing and cultivating such lands as I may make purchase of. I mean not to defray their expenses, this they can do themselves, such men as Billy Watson, J. Letchworth, H. Watson, etc., but they want a conductor and some place to settle upon when they shall have reached their place of destination with exhausted pockets and anxious minds

I have done no little violence to my feelings in delaying to write for some time; but under a fond expectation that I should be able to send you some satisfactory information, as well in relation to your affairs intrusted to my management, as of my intended movements towards an establishment in your country, I have the more readily given in to this delay, because our friend Rawlings has written several times, and we use one pen and communicate the same sentiments.....

.....Of all the devils that ever did beset a man in this life the want of money, in my present situation, is surely the most troublesome one. Not one cent can be had either from debtors or speculators. Two crops of tobacco on hand and 200 bbls. of corn; but all wont do. One of my Calvert farms is leased out for three years, and "Famore's Neck" is still in the market, and I have now a renewed prospect of making sale; but let this business end as it may, I consider the die is cast, and, God willing, our folks will be down upon you the early part of June. Our friend Rawlings was here a day or two ago and had his arrangements in a certain state of forwardness, having actually sold out his interest in the Duckett estate to the Judge and in a few days will embrace $1500, which with 16 or 18 negroes will give him a bold start. As to myself, I repeat that I must be off. Having accepted a military commission, (Lieut. Col. of Light Dragoon) I consider the Rubicon is passed. My present arrangement with the War Department will I hope, enable me to remain here until April, after which we shall break ground via Tennessee, descend the Cumberland or pass the wilderness.

You have, no doubt, heard of the appointment of Wm. Dent Beall [his cousin] to the same rank as myself in the infantry; and I expect you will hear of him ere long in that quarter. Gen. James Wilkinson [his uncle-in-law] is now on his way to New Orleans by water with a good number of newly appointed and newly recruited soldiers and will command in that quarter in person.

Pray look to our chances of settling in your neighborhood, and suffer not our worthy ones, Capt Jas. T. Magruder and Mr. Levin Wailes to go astray—we must keep together if possible. We shall need all of your advice upon the arrival of our people at Natchez, who will be sent under charge of careful friends, such for example as Mr. T. Rawlings, A. Steele, etc. I thank you for advice touching certain necessary purchases in Pennsylvania or Kentucky. I should most gladly purchase such mechanics as you recommend; but in truth negroes here are comparatively scarce and exceedingly dear. Etc Etc.

Alex Covington and Jas T. Magruder.

This flows from Col. Covington and myself to our friends Alexander Covington and Jas. T. Magruder, separately and collectively. All difficulties are now surmounted and with the indulgence of Heaven, a part of our families will be off for the Mississippi Territory the 1st week in April, to be followed by ourselves, dear wives and children in June or the latter part of the summer, if the Coln. can make terms with the God of War so as to secure delay until the hot months shall have passed by. Richard Skinner, John Steel and Thomas Rawlings will descend the Ohio with our people from Redstone, whither we shall attend them in person.—etc.

—L. Covington being obliged to continue on to New Orleans will probably leave Mrs. Covington in Washington for a while, where Dr. Rawlings will certainly take residence until purchase and improvements can be made to advantage—etc etc.”

You will have discovered that the U. S. Land office is opened and lands offered on good terms; one twentieth of the purchase money only to be paid down, and four years for the balance. Will it be possible for us all to get together upon some of this rich and cheap land?”

Dear Brother.

This will reach you a little while before our friend Dr Rawlings, who is 12 days on his journey to the waters of the Ohio. In a few more, by the blessings of Providence, he will have embarked at Brownville, (Redstone old fort) for the Natchez, where we hope for your preparation to receive him and family, together with about 50 black people. In my flock there are about 35, two of whom are yours. One of my gang, Charles, belongs to Gen. James Wilkinson and with whom I wish you to act as with one of my own.—I fondly flatter myself that my estate in your country, (should it please God the people arrive safe) will be far more profitable and more considerable than that I leave in Maryland; but I have to regret that so much of the trouble in the first stages of preparation should be imposed upon my friends. I am, however, in some degree consoled that should you need assistance, our friends Jas Magruder and perhaps Levin Wailes will be at hand and will willingly give their aid."

Dear Brother;—Your highly acceptable favor of the 14th has come to hand in the short space of four weeks; and should this have a favorable passage, it will probably reach you before our friend Dr Rawlings, who is hastening to your society with the whole of his family, and a flock of my blacks consigned to your management. He was at Pittsburg on the 2nd inst. and by this time must have passed a considerable distance down the Ohio—etc.

—The recent change in our foreign relations, as respects Great Britain is generally hailed as an event of the most pleasing importance. It has had the effect of opening the purses of speculation and commercial enterprise; but has produced no change in the price of tobacco, which still continues flat and dull.

You have excited some concern in my mind by the manner in which you mention your not having joined in the land purchase with our kinsman, Jas T. Magruder. Pray write me fully and particularly on this.

I fear Lavinia [Magruder] will not accompany us to Mississippi because of Mary's [her sister's] unwillingness; but probably Jimmy Magruder will, at the pressing instance of our friend Jas T. Magruder.

Your favors of 28th of June and 11th of July to hand and duely answered. From our friend Rawlings nothing is received since the favor which announced his arrival in your territory. I am the more anxious to hear from him in that he has not yet favored me with a statement of his expenditures, disbursement and purchases made on my account. This will be necessary information for me by which I shall be enabled to regulate my purchases, etc, as I pass on through Penn or Ky.

Having received orders from the War Dept to join the Army now under the immediate command of Gen. Wilkinson, I am hastening my preparations to that end; and, God willing, shall set out in three or four weeks

Say to Rawlings that I have seen his letters to General Bowie and Alex Contee, and the impression made by their contents is, that he is dissatisfied with the country. He tells Contee of the high price of poultry, vegetables and grain, the scarcity of money and of bad living in general. To General Bowie he says he has not yet fixed himself, but designs to cast about this fall for an eligible situation; hence the good folks conclude that he wishes himself back again, that he is quite disappointed in his expectations and calculations. And because money is as scarce there as at Nottingham, and payment for hirelings' wages cannot be had", the wise ones shrewdly suspect that we have made a bad business in sending our negroes thither. Pray let him put these good folks to rights and not suffer them to raise doubts and suspicions in men's minds for which there is no just grounds.

Dr. Rawlings;

Hancock Town, Md. Oct 15th 1809

My dear Rawlings; In a letter to my brother a few days since you are apprised of my departure from Gallilee and progress for Mississippi. I have said there that Mr Waters' family would not accompany us to Miss., being unable to command the requisite stock of cash. Things have however eventuated more favorably since and by express we are requested to await his coming, and this day we expect him and family, bag and baggage to overtake us. Tomorrow morning we resume our march, and God willing, shall be with you the early part of December. We are, however, under a state of apprehension on account of the state of the western waters. At present, we are told, that the Ohio is impassable, so low are its waters. Wheeling is now our aim, and if we find the waters too low to set us afloat there, we shall perhaps continue through the states of Ohio and Kentucky to Louisville, where there is never a want of water.

Our party will consist of Mr Waters and family, including five or six negroes, your brother Thomas Rawlings, James Magruder, Sammy Sasscer [my man Friday], my wife, five children, five servants and self, with the damndest cavalcade that ever man was burdened with. Not less than seven horses compose my troop. They convey a closed carriage (Jersey Stage) a gig and a horse cart; so that my family are transported with comfort and convenience, though at considerable expense. All these odd matters and contrivances I design to take with me to Miss, if possible. Mr Waters will also take down his wagon and team.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec 1st 1809

Alex. Covington

I snatch a hasty moment from the bustle of starting and a crowd of engagements to apprise you of my situation. This will be handed you by Thomas Rawlings or Sammy Sasscer, who is my agent and has charge of my horses, to be delivered to your care. I send them through by land on account of the low state of the water, and to save expense. After a most tedious, difficult and laborious voyage from Wheeling we arrived here on the 26th inst. and have been detained in executing certain military duties at the garrison in Newport; but shall again weigh anchor tomorrow or the next day and again court the favors of the liquid current which still remains unpropitious, from which I anticipate a renewal of our difficulties and fatigues. To drag through shoals, sandbars and ripples is my dreaded fate; but we all meet it with good health and unbroken spirits. Look for me about the end of the year and make some preparation for the wearied travelers. Our preparations in the way of provisions will be trifling. The want of room in our boat and scanty means confine me to a few hundred pounds of pork and a few barrels of flour. Etc Etc.

There are many outstanding points in this old writing besides such explanations as they give of the reasons that led them thither—the beauty and grace of their English, the good and wholesome home life they portrayed, their courage under all conditions, and their unswerving faith in God, and, after more than a hundred years, they serve still to stimulate us to better and higher things.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS WRITTEN BY SOME
MAGRUDERS IN ARKANSAS AND MISSISSIPPI

BY HELEN WOLFE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The following extracts are culled from letters of sons and daughters of Lloyd Magruder, son of Major Samuel Wade Magruder, of Montgomery County, Md., written to their brother, Thomas Contee Magruder, of Washington, D. C., from 1841 to 1860.

The desire to better their fortunes, and the presence in Mississippi of their step-sister, Eliza Lloyd Magruder, and her relatives, descendants of Alexander, the second son of Alexander the emigrant, seem to have influenced these Magruders in their migration.

The first letter in 1841 is from Charles Brooke Magruder, in Little Rock, Arkansas. By that time he was assistant cashier in the State Bank. Later he is in Batesville, Arkansas, married to Isabel Ann Pelham and on a plantation. He died in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Eliza Lloyd Magruder made her home with Mrs. Olivia Dunbar, her mother's sister, at "Arundo," Miss. There she died 1876.

Lloyd Magruder joined his brother Charles in Batesville, where he studied law with Judge Baker, and where he, at first, followed the profession of surveyor. He married Caroline Pelham, sister of Charles' wife. Later he went to California and Idaho. He was murdered for his money in Montana in 1863 by road agents as he was returning from a successful expedition to Virginia City. Ann Holmes Magruder, coming out on invitation of Charles, remained as wife of Judge Thomas Johnson, of Little Rock. Arthur and William Ogden Chappell Magruder followed their brothers; but both died shortly after arrival, unmarried.

John tarried awhile; went to California in 1849, where he died in 1853. Mary C. H. Magruder and her husband, John A. Carter, lived in Batesville and Vidalia, La.; but they, with Lucy and Rebecca Johnson Magruder, returned to Montgomery County, Md.

These letters traveled before the days of air-mail, and took from eighteen to thirty-eight days in transit.

The people then were letter-writers. I doubt if many college graduates of today could do any better. One correspondent remarks: "If I have been guilty of egregious neglect please forgive."

In regard to family matters in 1841, Charles hopes his sister Ann will return with Gov. Fulton in the spring. Further he says: "I have written Gov. Fulton, Col. Sevier, and Judge Cross in regard to appointment at Navy or Army Academy for Lloyd." In 1842 Charles regrets he is unable to send money requested for assistance of his brother-in-law, John A. Carter; but he says: "I hope every exertion will be made to raise money sooner than the homeplace should go out of the family." This was Locust Grove, Montgomery County, Md., which was sold in that generation. Charles says, "I am short of funds as the Bank pays its officers in general currency of the country, and that Arkansas paper is most depreciated."

On May 22, 1843, Charles announces his engagement to Miss Pelham, daughter of Col. C. H. Pelham, of Batesville, Arkansas; and in July, 1844, he is residing in Batesville, and urging John A. Carter to come as there is a good opening for a Democratic lawyer. Oct. 25, 1845, he writes: "I have finished sowing twenty-two bushels of wheat. It is up and looks finely. I shall not attempt corn next season, as I can purchase cheaper than raise it. I have bought eight hundred bushels in the field this year at ten cents a bushel. I have put up for fattening 26 fine hogs, and I have a fine lot of shoats. I have 20 head of cattle, four fine mares and a lot of sheep."

Lloyd is in Batesville by this time, but has gone on surveying expedition to the woods. Later, Jan. 9, 1846 Lloyd writes "Brother and sister have been lucky in the way of Christmas gifts—they have a fine boy, Charles Pelham Magruder." Lloyd is glad his brother-in-law, John A. Carter, would start south after the break of ice in the Ohio.

March 22, 1849, Ann writes that Lloyd and Dr. Pelham expect to leave for California the following Monday. Lloyd's outfit cost three hundred dollars and Sister Ann made him three pairs of pantaloons and two coats.

On Nov. 24, 1849, more of the family have arrived at Batesville. Ann rejoices at the safe arrival of our friends and says: "Ogden was extremely ill at Napoleon. Dr. Kirkwood here thinks his heart is affected. The week they got here Conference was sitting in Batesville. We heard Tuesday night they were at Jacksonport, but they did not arrive until Thursday morning—only thirty miles. The horses were so miserable they could not get along. The servants staid one night in the woods and they all took colds."

"It cost Mr. Carter almost as much to come from New Orleans here as it did to get there. The river is too low for any boats to get further than Jacksonport. They suffered greatly from sea-sickness, and had a severe storm off Cape Hatteras."

"There are a great many persons moving to this Country this fall. Almost every day you see five or six wagons pass. The day Mr. Carter got here thirteen passed thru town on their way to Izzard County."

"We all dined on Monday at Colonel Pelham's. Eight preachers were there, six of whom staid all during Conference."

"Ann sits up all night with Mrs. Zollichaffer, who died soon after, leaving a son nine days old. The family will return to Baltimore in the spring. Ann sends thanks for articles for a fair; and wishes some of her friends would stop in at the fair just to see what we Rackensackers can do."

Jan. 24, 1855, our faithful letter writer Ann writes: "There was a boat up last week, the first since last spring. Provisions are quite high—$10.50 for flour and corn is 75c a bushel"—Quite a jump since 1845.

Ann thinks well of her town, saying: "Batesville is not so far behind the times, when I tell you that there are two music teachers, three French, one German, one Italian and three quite large schools—quite smart for us out in the back woods."

In 1855, "There is quite a mania for moving to Texas; the crops having failed so the last year or two, persons are becoming discouraged." November, 1855, John A. Carter has the California fever and urges Thomas to join him. In the end neither went.

Lucy Beall had chills and fevers; but she took plenty of quinine and red pepper and a bitters of wild cherry, dogwood and whiskey.

Social life was enjoyed, and even then the young people did not come home until daybreak.

Charles writes from Little Rock: "I attended a very pleasant party last evening at Col. Ashley's. He has a daughter just returned from school—quite pretty and very agreeable with a few hundred thousands of dollars to decorate a young man's pocket should he have sufficient charm to gain her good will."

From Arundo, Eliza Lloyd Magruder: "I was at the wedding of the beauty of the county last Wednesday evening. I never was in quite such a squeeze. There was about 200 persons there. They have a large house with front and back galleries above and below. Both of the upper galleries were enclosed with cotton bagging. The meat table was set the whole length of one and the desert table of the other. Aunt Olivia Dunbar, Mrs. Jo Shields and I and our escorts left at one o'clock. The young folks remained and danced till daylight."

Lucy's description of the plantation of Mr. Joseph Dunbar is interesting—"It would do you good to see how things are managed both on farm and in the house. I never saw such system; there are ten women and three men about the house and yard, who never go out in the crops. They are always employed—no idle bread eaten here. They look tidy in their dress, pleasant and are very respectful. I have not seen an angry person since I have been here. Aunt Olivia has a first-rate overseer, a Marylander, Mr. Ireland from Calvert County. She gives him a thousand dollars, thinking she had better give him this than an ordinary man three hundred."

"The darkies have been very busy all day preparing for a frolic; there is to be a wedding among them tonight."

Uncle Dunbar makes trips to Natchez and New Orleans. Again a letter was sent when man went to Natchez for Uncle Dunbar. In December the hyacinths have been blooming a week.

In April trees are in full foliage and long moss hangs from trees.

Lucy and Eliza go visiting Eliza's Aunt, Mrs. Lavinia Turpin. While there, "Mrs. Turpin's daughter, Mrs. Hutton, went into Natchez and purchased our black frocks."

"Aunt Lavinia says she feels a great nearness to all of Lloyd Magruder's children, that he felt like a brother. She looks very unlike Aunt Dunbar.

The young ladies make numerous visits including one at home of Mr. Kerr, the minister.

Many friends are entertained at Arundo—the two Mrs. Archers and Miss Archer, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston. "Two very clever beaux passed the morning with us—Dr. Archer and a Mr. van Bibber. Mrs. Turpin and Miss Ann Eliza Newman spent last week here."

We have a most delightful preacher in this neighborhood—a very pious man. Again “Our minister gave us a most excellent sermon yesterday from the Sixth Chapter and Tenth Verse of Daniel.” Then “The Rev. Mr. Drake died very suddenly last week. He was one of the brightest Christians that I have ever known.”

Politics were among other things discussed. In 1844 we are told, “Political excitement is well subsided by this time. I hope the Marylanders have not acted quite as imprudently as some of the Missippians, Tennesseans and Louisiannians—sell their property to be paid for when Clay was elected.” From Little Rock “The Whigs are calculating very largely on a great majority of the States going for Clay in the coming election; but I cannot believe Clay can ever be President of this glorious Republic.”

Jan., 1845, “The Know Nothings are carrying everything before them in the legislature. They are not publicly known as such. Col. Noland told us old Mr. Creece would be turned out of office, because he is an Englishman by birth. He has been in this State nearly twenty years and before that in Alexandria.”

The weather is not overlooked in these letters: “Dec. 14, 1844, Aunt Olivia and I rode out without bonnets or shawls two weeks ago, then it grew cold and there has been frost every morning—the finest spell for curing meat. Uncle Dunbar killed a hundred hogs since this day week”.

July 18, 1844, one writer fears: “Our state will become very sickly this season owing to the very high waters last spring.” Jan. 1855, “a slight snow fell and I had Jarrett sweep some off the north side of the house and froze a custard.” An item of news from Arundo, “There was one of the most daring acts ocured within a half mile of this place on the last night of January. Mr. Johnston’s carriage driver hoisted a window and went in the house and robbed it of $2200—$1600 in gold, the rest in paper. Mr. J. and family sleeping in a room on one side of the one in which the money was. The robbery was discovered the next morning. The instant his master saw him, he knew he could not be deceived,—his countenance betrayed him.”

News from home was most welcome. Charles “perceives from the Intelligencer that W. S. Gaither is one of the electors for President. I suppose he owes his rise to the influence of his father.”

Eliza in 1846 wants to know “who is the widower that visits Locust Grove so sociably. I cannot think of anyone in the neighborhood except Jack Jones.”

Eliza mentions Ellin Zoe’s safe arrival; receipt of a long letter from Mrs. Muncaster; sends her love to the families of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Robinson. In 1849 she feels sorry to hear of poor Walter Muncaster’s death, adding: “It struck me as a singular coincidence that he and Thomas Neale should be taken at the same time.” Remembrances are sent to Mr. Young’s and Mr. Walker’s family. In 1860 “Cousin E. Willson leaves Wednesday for Maryland.” Inquiry is made for Mr. Chappell and Dr. Wootton.

Charles writes: “Viers joins me in my best wishes. I have written Otho Z. Muncaster several times and received no answer—directed my letters to the care of a hardware house in New York.”

After Rebecca Magruder's return to Maryland she writes in answer to an inquiry “I am on the qui vive to know who this Mr. Magruder is. Ask him if he is the grandson of Nathaniel Magruder of Baton Rouge and son of Benjamin Magruder. If so, his father was one of the most polished, handsome, cultivated men I ever met. He was a graduate of Jackson, La. College and of Yale, graduating at law before he was twenty-one. He was educated North and imbibed their sentiments and at beginning of the War went North.”

“At the time of our leaving the South there was a Dr. Leonard Magruder there, Prof. M. in Baton Rouge and a Mr. John Magruder in the upper part of the State. Col. Lloyd Wailes of Miss. told us he and our father were named for Gov. Lloyd of Md.

There are letters from the '49's of this family; but of them anon.

ADDRESS AT SAINT PAUL'S CHURCH, OCTOBER 17, 1930.

REV. CHARLES E. CRUSOE, D. D., RECTOR ST. PAUL'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH (BADEN), MARYLAND

For the past twenty-five years popular attention has been directed toward American antiques, and seldom a week passes but that we in this section of the country are tormented by antique hunters, commercial and otherwise, urging us to “set a price on” whatever article of antiquity we may happen to possess.

The mine of old furniture has been discovered, the charm of colonial life has been visioned, and those with the means are determined to get hold of early American pieces regardless of cost.

It has seemed to us strange as we have appreciated our privilege of ministering in several of the old country churches here in Maryland and in Virginia, that the early American churches have received so little popular attention.

Less elaborate it is true—harder to get to than the more recent and costly churches of the cities, nevertheless they abound in beauty, tradition and romance.

In a few cases the growth of the country has brought some one old church into the center of a more or less modern community, such as Christ Church, Alexandria; or old Pohick or Bruton Churches, but they are few in number and the true condition of most of the old churches is indeed quite pitiful.

Speaking from our own condition in this parish, the run-down appearance of the average rural church is no reflection upon the loyalty of its people, for we are proud of this old church, and we maintain it to the limit of our means and ability.

But families move away, and the younger generation goes off to the city in search of employment, and those who remain behind grow less able to maintain the outer fabric of that which they love so much—their old parish church.

The time is not far distant we believe when, with the help of such organizations as that meeting with us today, these old historic churches will be in a better state of repair, and will amply repay their generous friends by opening up their wealth of antiquity and charm.

To read the true story of this community as a part of an American colony, one would find upon investigation a feeling of a religion bequeathed from the Reformation.

Few other churches were built in this section of Maryland save those of the Church of England, although this was not formally established until 1692. Prior to this time, a few brick buildings had been erected here and there to replace the first log buildings used as churches, although after the Establishment, many churches were built in the thirty parishes.

Taking up some of the interesting facts concerning this old church, from our parish records and early histories of Maryland, we learn that each family man was compelled to pay a tax of 40 pounds of tobacco for the building and maintenance of the parish church, regardless of whether he liked it or not, or whether he was a Catholic or a Protestant.

At that time a pound of tobacco was worth about 3 pence, 6 cents in our present money; but in 1732 it became legal tender at a penny a pound. This present building without its additions in 1793—about 100 years after the first part was constructed—cost about 85,000 lbs. of tobacco, or about $5,100 because St. Paul's Parish was at one time the richest parish in the whole State of Maryland.

As the population in this community grew, the original church was enlarged as it now stands in 1793, and the seating capacity of the old boxed pews grew from 100 including the gallery to some 250 as at present.

In this original church, as in all of the early churches, the chancel was in the east where now you may see the Bishop Claggett Memorial Window which was installed in 1852. The church entrance was in the west end with probably another in the south, as we gather from the early parish records.

One may yet see with careful observation, showing through the plastered wall on the north, two closed doorways which originally opened into two robing rooms—one for the priest and another for the parish clerk or assistant minister.

A student of antiquities is oftentimes amused by traditionary tales handed down by inhabitants who have had them handed down to them by their ancestors, and in no place are they more wearisome than when visiting some of our older churches.

"These bricks were brought from England," one tells you as he recites the early tradition of the erection of his church: "Geo. Washington was baptized in that font" another tells you as he points with pride to a discolored and nicked piece of marble in the front of the old church; while another solemnly declares that "our communion vessels were a present from Queen Anne."

But as a matter of fact the greater percentage of brick builded into these old churches was burned on the church premises; while Geo. Washington would have been a muchly baptized baby and Queen Anne far more religious than history even shows her to have been, if all old traditions were true.

Still there are exceptions to every rule, aren't there? And we claim to be such an exception in many ways for we have both our parish records, and the professional opinion of one of England's foremost authorities on old English Churches.

This English friend, on a recent trip to America, journeyed down from Boston for a visit, and to give us his professional opinion concerning numerous things in and about this old church.

Both the parish records and the expert opinion of our friend assures us that the original church was built with brick brought over in the hold of sailing vessels as ballast.

These and many other interesting facts are brought out in the little booklet we have recently published under the title of "As it was, etc."

In the early days that gallery in the South was located over the door there in the West from where it was removed in 1793 to its present location.

A vestry record of 1734 shows that in the drawing of lots for the selection of pews in the gallery, that each pew was rented for, and a deed was given for one year at the rate of $15 per pew.

Tradition in most old churches is to the effect that the gallery was always built for the slaves, but the records of this parish show that the gallery was a favorite place in which to sit, and at times probably slumber in peace, or provide a good chance for the younger folk to hold hands unseen by those in authority.

From the first known priest-in-charge of this parish in 1682 the name and length of office of every clergyman is set down in the booklet I have just mentioned.

And the first vestry as recorded in the record of 1693 contains the name of one to be found on that tablet—Samuel Magruder, while subsequent records show the names of quite a few of the Magruder clan, as well as of other prominent families still represented in this parish, and in this present congregation.

While we make no claim that Geo. Washington was baptized in that old font, a vestry record shows that it was bought in England in 1752. The English expert gives as his opinion that it came originally from Italy, and is much older than this original church.

Queen Anne did not give us our communion vessels, but they date from King George the First, nearly 100 years before Anne's time, and the value of $10,000 has been set upon the Paten and Chalice by an eminent authority.

Our Bible was printed by His Majesty's command in 1739 at a cost of two pounds and eight shillings. The hanging sun-dial, brought from England and installed in the front of the building in 1753, was the community time piece. This is the only church in American which is so adorned.

Strange, indeed, that churches like this one are ever neglected, and the fact that at least one each year is burned or destroyed is a sad commentary upon the times.

MRS. MARY ANN GRAY SILVER

BY GRAY SILVER, WEST VIRGINIA

Mrs. Mary Ann Gray Silver died at the home of her son, Gray Silver, Martinsburg, West Virginia, on July 20, 1930, after a long illness, in the eighty-ninth year of her life.

Mrs. Silver's was a remarkable life. In her life's span of not quite eighty-nine years, she had watched everyday life change from primitive early settler days to modern civilization. Born four years after the first railroad was laid through this country, she saw as a young girl the introduction of the first family coach (her father was the purchaser of that coach) to supersede horse and wagon as a means of transportation; as a woman, the growth of the railroad; of good roads for traffic; as an older woman the development of automobiles, which she enjoyed very much, and of airplanes in which she was greatly interested.

She remembered distinctly four wars: the Mexican war in 1847 to which her uncle David Wardrop Gray went as a lieutenant never to return; the War between States, in which both her father and husband served as officers; the Spanish American War, in which a daughter nursed the ill and wounded soldiers; and the World War, in which her son served his country in many civil capacities.

Mrs. Silver was born December 19, 1841, at the Gray family homestead, which had been founded by her grandfather, John Gray, a Scotchman from Fifeshire. This home was near Gerardstown, Berkeley County, and there she grew up and resided until her marriage. She was the eldest daughter of Captain James William Gray, C. S. A., and his wife, Martha Jane Gilbert. She was educated by private tutors, in the private schools of the County, and at the Valley Female Institute, a forerunner of Fairfax Hall, of Winchester, Va. This school was conducted by the Rev. Silas Billings and his two daughters, the Misses Mary and Cornelia Billings of beloved memory. Three of Mrs. Silver's daughters were educated in this same school. She and her sister Jane attended this school about two and a half years when typhoid fever claimed the life of the younger sister and abruptly ended school days for the elder sister, as a devoted father hesitated to return this daughter to an endangered environment.

Later, about 1852, Mary assisted her father during the years of his membership in the Virginia Legislature. Captain Gray's eyesight failed during this time, and as his secretary (Mrs. Silver always said amenuensis) his daughter was called upon to attend to much of his work, and became widely acquainted with the leaders of public life in the stirring days just before the War. Captain Gray was a warm adherent of the Southern cause, and a leader in his section; consequently he and his family frequently suffered for his loyalty to the cause he believed right. Mrs. Silver had vivid recollections of the invasion of her father's home by Federal soldiers, the burning of barns and other buildings, the taking of the last loaf of bread from the big dutch oven on the hillside, the hiding of her beautiful and beloved riding horse, and most especially, of the picketing of the home by these Federal troops to prevent the father's return, and the flight to points farther south.

Mrs. Silver was a great reader and a most interesting conversationalist with a keen sense of humor and a remarkable memory. Her faculties remained intact and her interest in current events continued to the end. These attributes, together with her store of memories of earlier days and her stanch character, made her a host of friends among the younger generation, as well as the older people of Berkley County.

She was a bright and happy Christian. Never once did her faith fail. Truly she loved the Kingdom of her Lord and delighted to worship the Lord with her substance.

Mrs. Silver was of slight physique and very quiet and unassuming. A friend of the family writing to a daughter after her passing, said, "Your mother was always to me the ideal little lady—so quiet and composed—she had a most alert mind and charming personality."

In 1868 Mary Ann Gray was wedded to Francis Silver, 3rd., of White Hall, Frederick County, Virginia, where the Silver family had lived for three generations. They made their home in White Hall for several years and the son, Gray, and the daughter Martha were born there. Later the family moved to Berkley, the county of Mrs. Silver's nativity, and made their home at Silver Hill Farms, near Gerardstown, where the younger children were born and grew to maturity, and where Colonel Silver died in 1885. Mrs. Silver reared the family of five children—a son having died in infancy. And in the latter years of her life she came to live with her son, Gray Silver, in Martinsburg.

She leaves five children: Gray Silver and Martha J. Silver, in Martinsburg; Mrs. J. W. Stuart Boyd, Washington; Mrs. Lester Chenoweth Hoffman, Bunker Hill, W. Va.; and Mrs. Louis Feuilletau Harper, Winchester, Va.

Funeral services were held at the home, followed by graveside services at the Presbyterian Church Cemetery, Gerardstown. Dr. John B. Bittinger officiated. Mrs. Silver was the oldest living member of the Gerardstown Presbyterian Church at the time of her death.

"An honored life, a peaceful end,
And Heaven to crown it all."

Mrs. Mary Gray Silver was the daughter of James William Gray and his wife, Martha Jane Gilbert.

Granddaughter of John Gray and Jane Hyndman Gilbert.

Great-granddaughter of John Gray and Jean Wardrop, of Fifeshire, Scotland. Jean Wardrop Gray was quaintly described as a "gentlewoman brought up in ease in her father's house, Braden Hall, Fifeshire, Scotland." John Gray was educated at St. Andrews College, University of Edinburgh. He acquired eleven languages, some long after he left college. He was a keen student of history and political economy.

After the fatal battle of Culloden, Scotland was laid waste. Fire and sword, fines, imprisonment and death filled the cup of fury for the unhappy Scots, and the Grays shared the fortunes of their compatriots. In the latter part of 1765, David and John Gray joined their Uncle William Gray in America. They came first to Alexandria, thence into the Shenandoah Valley, settling in what is now Berkeley and Jefferson Counties, West Virginia. David and John both served with Stephenson's Riflemen in the American Revolution. David Gray who lived near Shepherdstown, was an invited guest (official witness) upon the occasion of the first successful trip of James Rumsey's steamboat on the Potomac River, Dec. 3, 1787. John Gray was a "government surveyor." He surveyed large tracts of land in the far western States of Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee. He acquired an ample estate in Berkeley County where he founded a home. A large portion of this estate is still in the possession of his descendants.

May 28, 1782, John Gray married Mrs. Mary Ann (Sherrard) Cowan. Mrs. Gray left no children. On March 21, 1805, he married Jane Hyndman Gilbert. He was fifty-nine years of age and his bride twenty-two. Jane Gilbert was born in 1783 in County Antrim, Ireland, of Scotch parents. She was the daughter of Edward Gilbert and his wife, Jean Sim Rainey, of Covenanter stock from Galloway. The Gilberts owned a bleach green near Belfast, and had other interests in the lace and linen industries. They emigrated to America in 1785. They took shipping from Belfast and landed at Philadelphia. Edward Gilbert established a home in New Jersey, and died there a few years later. His widow drifted with the Scotch-Irish tide through the Path and Cumberland Valleys into the Shenandoah Valley, where she reared her family of six children and died in 1837.

On these tides the ancestors of Mary Gray Silver drifted together, forming an ancestral background of sturdy worth, from which she derived both integrity and charm.

"Her children rise up to call her blessed."

DORA LEE HEDGES GOODWYN

BY MARY H. B. RODGERS

Dora Lee Hedges Goodwyn, widow of Judge W. Sam'l. Goodwyn, was born Sept. 5, 1863, at "Maple Grove," Berkeley County, West Virginia.

She was educated by private teachers at "Cedar Grove," the ancestral home of her father, Decatur Hedges, in Berkeley County, and later attended Mary Baldwin Seminary at Staunton, Va. She married Dec. 10, 1884, W. Samuel Goodwyn, of Emporia, Va., who died Oct. 6, 1915. She was a resident of Greenville County, Virginia, for nearly forty-one years, and retained her citizenship there until her death in Denver, Nov. 28, 1929.

Always a student, she had devoted her energies for years to historical and genealogical research; also to copying records in the Clerk's Office at Emporia, Va., which have been published in the William and Mary College Quarterly, and Tyler's Historical and Genealogical Magazine. A work invaluable in establishing service of ancestors and eligibility to membership in Societies. Later, she was appointed by the Virginia Historical Pageant Association one of the historians to prepare essays on Virginia History for the school and college students; also, to write up local history.

In March, 1910, she was commissioned by the Board of Management of the National Society D. A. R. to organize a Chapter at Emporia, and effected the organization of Joseph Hedges Chapter on June 14, 1911, with 28 members, of which she was regent until her resignation May 23, 1924.

In 1914 she was appointed Chairman of the Revision Committee to revise the by-laws of the Virginia State Conference, D. A. R.

September, 1911, she was commissioned Organizing Regent of the State, President of the National Society United States Daughters of 1812, and Nov. 4, 1911, organized the first Virginia Chapter of that Society at Emporia with 13 members, acting as regent until May, 1925, when she left Virginia.

During her incumbency, she served as genealogist for both Chapters, and contributed many valuable and interesting papers. In 1918, she was serving as Chapter Regent of the Daughters of 1812, State President and National Vice-President at the same time. In October, 1920, she was elected Honorary President of the Virginia United States Daughters of 1812 for life.

In addition to her membership in the D. A. R., and U. S. D. of 1812, Mrs. Goodwyn was a member of the Association of State Presidents, Past and Present, and numerous historical and hereditary societies.

She was a Colonial Dame upon the records of 26 ancestors, and at the time of her passing had almost completed four more lines to Colonial ancestors.

She became a member of the Clan Gregor Society by right of descent from Capt. Samuel Magruder, born in Calvert County in 1655, and died in Prince George's County in 1711.

Mrs. JOHN SPENCER BUKEY

BY ALICE MAGRUDER BUKEY

Roberta Julia Magruder Bukey was born at Frostburg, Maryland, Jan. 5, 1851, the fourth and youngest daughter of Greenberry Magruder, II, and his wife, Elizabeth Hurley. Her father was born in Georgetown, D. C., and her mother near Darnestown, Montgomery County, Maryland.

Greenberry Magruder, II, was a civil engineer, and was engaged on various public works of his time, beginning on the Chesapeake & Ohio

Canal, The Old National Road, The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, etc. This work took him westward, and he finally located at Marietta, Ohio; and it was here that Roberta Magruder was educated in the fine public and private schools of this old college town, which has always had a high reputation for its intellectual atmosphere. And, more than anything else, in her father's home where high ideals, study of history and literature, and the traditions of a fine race were always adhered to. Here it was that she met John Spencer Bukey, of a prominent pioneer family of West Virginia. They were married at Williamstown, West Virginia, August, 1868, where her father had his home at that time.

Several children were born to them, but only two survived infancy. Virginia Bukey, born March, 1871, and died at Vienna, Fairfax County, Virginia, July 29, 1900, and Benton M. Bukey, born Nov. 6, 1879, now of Chicago.

After moving to Fairfax County, Virginia in 1885, she became interested in genealogical work, and later in the D. A. R. She was also a deep student of philosophy and political economy.

Mrs. Bukey always took an active part in the religious and intellectual welfare of her community. She and her husband were active in the establishment of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Comforter in Vienna, Virginia. She was also interested in club work, and was for some time president of a woman's organization which did important work in her community.

Mrs. Bukey was a member of the D. A. R. of the District of Columbia, before the organization of Clan Gregor, of which she was a charter member. After its organization she conceived the idea of a Magruder Chapter in the D. A. R. which she organized and of which he was regent for several years.

Later she withdrew from the Magruder Chapter, and with a number of friends, organized the Captain Joseph Magruder Chapter, D. A. R., the Chapter being named for her great-grandfather, Captain Joseph Magruder, who served with the Maryland troops during the Revolutionary War.

She served on a number of important committees of the D. A. R. in the District of Columbia.

Contemporary with her work in the D. A. R., she was active in genealogical work, and by invitation became a member of other patriotic organizations, including The Daughters of War of 1812, Dames of the Loyal Legion, Colonial Dames, Patriots and Founders, Virginia Historical Society, and several other similar societies.

During the World War, although nearly seventy years of age, she worked many long hours under Red Cross direction, and received the Red Cross Medal as one of the many devoted women who gave their time unstintingly to this work.

On October 19, 1919, her beloved husband for fifty years passed away, and from that time she failed rapidly until she was no longer able to carry on the patriotic work she so dearly loved, and during the last six years of her life she required constant nursing care, which was provided for her by her devoted son at Riggs Sanitorium at Ijamsville, Frederick County, Maryland, where she died on May 17, 1930, in her eightieth year.

She was laid to rest beside her husband, First Lieutenant John Spencer Bukey, in Arlington National Cemetery, services being conducted by Rev. Enoch Magruder Thompson, Chaplain of the American Clan Gregor Society.

Roberta Julia Magruder Bukey was the daughter of Greenberry Magruder, II, and Elizabeth Hurley; granddaughter of Greenberry Magruder, I, and Jane Scott; great-granddaughter of Captain Joseph Magruder and second wife, Catherine Fleming; great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Magruder, III, and Margaret Jackson; great-great-great-granddaughter of Ninian Magruder and Elizabeth Brewer; great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Magruder and Sarah Beall; great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Alexander Magruder, immigrant.

ANNIE REED HILL GEDDES

BY SUSIE MAY GEDDES VAN DEN BERG, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Well do I remember my mother telling me in these lines, of her tender, watchful care:

Who ran to help me when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell;
Or kiss the place to make it well?
My Mother.

She was full of poetry and quotations which she used quite lavishly. This charming habit was an index to her character and to her high ideals—for things spiritual played a leading and definite part in her life.

Born in a romantic age, on a large plantation, with a long line of good people behind her—an ancestry free from anything sordid or demeaning—Annie Reed Hill came into this world under a bright star. The second child of a young and gracious mother and an indulgent father; surrounded by adoring servitors and devotedly attended by Mammy Nelly, no wonder there was mysticism and romanticism in her character. This ethereal side, however, was more than counterbalanced by her most dominant characteristic—that of a strict sense of duty—a sense she carried into every phase of her daily experience. She was a devoted daughter, a sympathetic and understanding wife, a mother always ready for self-sacrifice, and a trusted and respected neighbor and friend.

Educated in the Visitation Convent in Frederick, Maryland, she was graduated at the age of sixteen with high honors as her "premiums" attest.

She was an accomplished and pleasing pianist, and was frequently called upon to entertain, with her music, distinguished visitors at the Convent.

ANNIE REED HILL GEDDES
BORN, DECEMBER 5, 1847; DIED, JUNE 29, 1901

Had college education been available in her day, I am sure she would have chosen a career.

The War between the States, with its devastating results to slave owners, was being waged during her two last years at school, and she returned after graduation to a changed condition, but with little difference outwardly, as her father had old and devoted slaves who refused to leave him, and to whom he deeded quarters for their life time.

On the 6th day of July, 1869, at the age of 22, she married Charles Wright Geddes, my father, only son of Robert Geddes of the Eastern Shore, and Susan Scott Matlack, of Baltimore County. Here her romanticism again asserted itself for her husband was double her age, a naval officer (resigned), who had won her, as did Othello, the gentle Desdemona, by his tales of adventure on the sea and experiences in foreign courts at which he had been presented.

Their married life of more than 30 years was tranquil and happy. Of their union nine children were born: Susan Mary, Isabelle Hill, Charles Walter, Rosalind Wright, Marie Travilla, Annie Virginia, Robert William, Helen Thomas and Mildred Emily, all of whom survived her.

It has been to me a source of deep gratitude that she was spared the grief of the loss of either husband or child.

Annie Reed Hill was born in the family home, Glenway—the homestead on the original land grant from the English Crown—on December 5, 1847, the second child of William Wilson Hill and Mary Thomas Magruder Hill. She was granddaughter of Thomas Magruder and Mary Clark, great-granddaughter of Isaac Magruder and Sophia Baldwin, great-great-granddaughter of Nathan Magruder and Rebecca Beall, great-great-great-granddaughter of John Magruder and Susannah Smith, great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Magruder and Sarah Beall, and great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Alexander Magruder, the immigrant.

WILLIAM ROBERT MAGRUDER

BY WILLETT CLARK MAGRUDER, KENTUCKY

William Robert Magruder was born Jan. 7, 1840, near Shelbyville, Ky. He was the son of Josiah Harding Magruder and Elizabeth Cardwell Magruder. The former was born near Winchester, Va., Jan. 15, 1795, and the latter Sept. 13, 1800, in the same house in which all of her children were born. He was the grandson of Dr. Daniel Magruder and Sarah Barry Magruder, who was born Feb. 24, 1764, while her parents were enroute from Ireland. William Robert attended the schools in his neighborhood, his last schooling being at Shelbyville, Ky., under J. W. and Thomas J. Dodd. He worked on his father's farm until 1870, when on Nov. 29th he married Lucinda Clark, daughter of Elizabeth and Willett Clark, of Shelby County. By this marriage he had three children: Willett Clark, Mary Elizabeth, and Lucinda Edna. On May 27, 1878, Lucinda Magruder died, and on Oct. 14, 1880, he married

Hattie E. Tinsley, of Franklin County, Kentucky. She was the daughter of Charles E. and Harriet Medley Tinsley. She died Aug. 25, 1898. On Sept. 5, 1899, William Robert married Lizzie Cardwell, of Hemp-ridge, Shelby County, Kentucky, a daughter of George and Elizabeth Threlkild Cardwell, of Shelby County. He joined the M. E. Church South at Clayvillage Jan. 10, 1862, under the preaching of Thomas G. Bosley. In August, 1868, he was elected steward, and later served in various capacities, such as Trustee of Church Property, Recording Steward, Secretary of Quarterly Conference, delegate to several conferences, and Superintendent of the Sunday School. He was a Mason, a member of Solomon Lodge No. 5, A. F. and A. M. On Jan. 6, 1930, his wife, Lizzie Cardwell died, and on Jan. 30, 1930, William Robert Magruder died.

GEORGE MITCHELL MAGRUDER

BY MABEL MAGRUDER PERMENTER, FLORIDA

George Mitchell Magruder was born on a farm seven miles from Quitman, Georgia, on October 22, 1863.

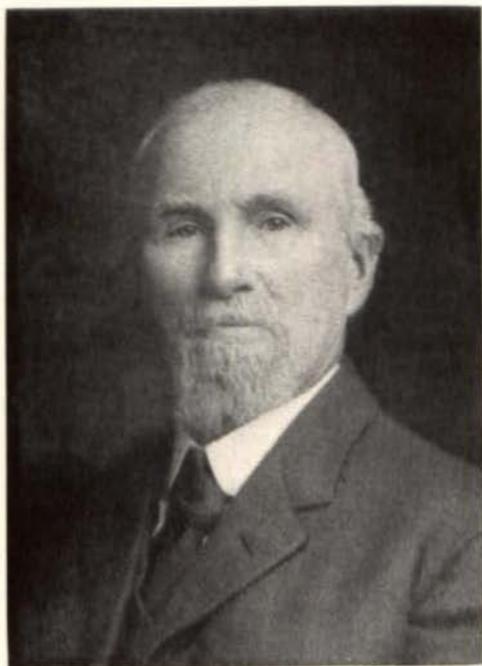

His father was Joseph Alva Magruder who married, first, Ann Edwards by whom he had two children: John Archibald who died in Texas, and Emma who married William Hunter who died at Ovieda, Florida, in 1878.

Joseph Alva Magruder's second wife, Laura Estelle (Hunter) Gaulden, to whom he was married October 20, 1862, was a widow with two children, Eugene Scriven Gaulden, who died at Eugene, Fla., June, 1927, and Julia Gaulden who married George Brown and lived at Ovieda, Fla. By his second marriage, Joseph Alva Magruder had two boys, George Mitchell, my father, and Edward Lee Magruder who lives at Bainbridge, Georgia.

It was in 1873 that the family came to Florida to live and took up a homestead at Ovieda, in Orange County, where they planted an orange grove. They were among the pioneer orange growers in the famous Indian River section. Joseph Alva Magruder and his wife, Laura Estelle, are both buried in Hunter Cemetery in Quitman, Georgia.

George Mitchell was ten years old when his family left Georgia. At the age of seventeen, with his mother's consent, he left home and lived with a widow and her sons in an adjoining county. This first winter the boys contracted with a saw mill to furnish them with logs.

While at this work, he met a surveyor with whom he became great friends. I wish I knew that man's name but the only record that I have of him is a small picture taken in a buggy with one of his race horses, of which he was very fond. I know that he was interested in some way with the famous race horse, "Maud S." Recognizing in George Mitchell a desire to be independent and develop himself, he brought him to Jacksonville where he soon found work at Merrill-Stevens machinery shop, which was at that time a small blacksmith and machine shop on the banks of the river. Here he served his apprenticeship of four years and learned to love machinery. At the age of twenty-one he got his engineer's license.

WILLIAM ROBERT MAGRUDER

BORN, JANUARY 7, 1840; DIED, JANUARY 30, 1930

For a few years he was on boats up and down the St. Johns River. His first boat was the "Twilight," then the "Mermaid," running between Jacksonville and Mayport, and later a boat belonging to the Beach & Miller Line, running between Jacksonville and Sanford.

At about the age of twenty-seven years, after hard study, he received his mariner's license and left the river boats for a position with the Plant Line. He was chief engineer on the S. S. Margaret, and then on the S. S. Tarpon, running between Tampa and Mobile.

In 1896 the Plant Steamship Line built the S. S. La Grande Duchess, which was at that time, the largest and finest coastwise steamer in the world, and my father, George Mitchell, was transferred to her as first assistant engineer. After the first trip between Savannah and New York, Mr. Devlin, the chief engineer, was taken sick and, after an illness of several months, died. During that period my father was acting chief. At Mr. Devlin's death he was appointed chief engineer which position he held until the death of Henry B. Plant in 1899.

At this time he went with the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company to become chief engineer of the S. S. Nebraskan, but after a conversation with the chief engineer of the Line, Mr. Lasso, he was made assistant superintendent engineer for the Line.

During the Spanish-American War, he was temporarily transferred to a transport running between Charleston and Havana, Cuba, and was in Havana when the Battleship Maine was blown up.

In October of 1906 he was sent to San Francisco, Cal., to superintend repairs on the S. S. Nevadan, and the building of three of their largest freighters at the Union Iron Works, later taken over by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The new ships were the S. S. Mexican, the S. S. Columbian, and the S. S. Hawaiian.

After they were complete and sent to sea, the Company retained him as their superintending engineer of the Pacific Coast, which position he held until the Panama Canal was opened and they moved their offices back to New York when he resigned.

He then took a position as superintending engineer for W. B. Grace Steamship Company with whom he remained until 1922, when he resigned on account of poor health. In 1925 he took over the Keddie Inn Resort in the Feather River Canyon where he remained until his death. He was also interested in mining.

He possessed an inventive genius. I remember holding wire for him to make an electric light that would turn dim as well as bright. He completed it and had it in use long before we ever had, or heard of any others. His friends wanted him to patent it but he never would. The satisfaction of having made it was the only compensation he cared for.

While he was with the Hawaiian Line in New York, he and Mr. Lasso, chief engineer for the Line, completed an oil burner for use in steamships which was known as the Texas Burner, and was one of the first of its kind. I remember reading about it in some engineering book. The American-Hawaiian people thought so much of it that they had it installed in all their ships. The light and the oil burner were the most important of his inventions, but there were a number of minor things that I cannot recall.

My father looked and acted the gentleman that he was. Fond of beautiful things, he liked nothing better than to buy furnishings, bric-a-brac, etc., with unerring good taste, for his home. He was always busy and made many lovely things. His home was fitted with hammered brass electric fixtures, a set for the fire place, and a smoking stand, all his own work. The andirons had an ingenious secret compartment where he kept a little bag of jewels.

He loved his home and took great pleasure in having his many friends in for meals and a drink of wine or Scotch whiskey which he always had on hand.

He had a kind and tender heart and was always ready to help those in need. He was sincere in word. If he ever made a promise, it was as well as done. Independence of spirit, resourcefulness and rigidity of purpose were always outstanding traits of his character.

We children always looked forward to his being in port for he played and romped with us, and taught the boys to make boats and toys with which they took great delight. It was never necessary for him to punish one of us, as he had a way of looking at us that was more effective than any chastisement that he could have administered. We always knew what he meant and obeyed him.

He was not a religious man. He never went to church and, as far as I know, did not belong to one, but he was very scrupulous in regard to the dictates of his conscience. He was honorable and upright in every respect, and was loved and respected by his business associates and fellowmen.

He was a member of the San Francisco Transportation Club, San Francisco Southern Club, the Sequoia Country Club and a Fishing Club at Oakland, Cal. He was also a member of The Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers. He was a Mason and belonged to the Middleburg Lodge No. 107.

He was very fond of hunting and fishing, and after he retired from active life, spent much time in the mountains. He took great pride in his guns, of which he owned a very valuable collection. He especially loved the duck season and always brought home his quota. He loved his dogs and always owned one and sometimes several. They were well trained and seemed to understand every word he said. It was a delight to us children to see him train a bird dog. I remember one little dog that jumped overboard to follow him, after the ship had pushed off from the dock. Of course, the dog was drowned which grieved us all very much. One of his last dogs was Wong, a very smart and beautiful Chinese Chow, that slept by his bed, and was a strict guard over his car or anything that belonged to his master.

My father was married first on March 17, 1885, at Jacksonville, Florida, to Leila Mabel Bouchillon, (born Nov. 13, 1869), the oldest daughter of Benjamin Franklin Bouchillon, of a prominent old Huguenot family of South Carolina. By this marriage there were five children, four of whom are living: Mrs. Mabel A. Permenter, Jacksonville, Fla., George Archibald Magruder, Berkeley, Cal., Frank Lester Magruder, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Herbert Randolph Magruder, United States Navy, on United States S. S. Richmond. One son, Joseph Eugene Magruder, died in infancy.

He was married the second time to Cora C. Isbel, of Seattle, Washington, an artist of English and Scotch parentage. The great-grandfather on her mother's side was Sir Richard Wade of England, and her father's ancestors were pioneers with the pilgrims.

On November 16, 1929, after a short illness, he passed away. He was conscious almost to the end. Realizing that death was near, he was at peace and died with a smile on his face. Dr. Frank Mitchell Silsby of the First Presbyterian Church of Oakland, Cal., read the services for him in the beautiful Chapel of the Chimes. He also read Tennyson's beautiful poem, "Crossing the Bar." At his request, his body was cremated and is entombed in a niche procured by himself a number of years ago at the California Crematorium and Columbarium at Oakland, Cal., where he now rests in an environment of peace and quiet, bright with flowers and the cheer of singing birds that he loved so well.

George Mitchell Magruder was the son of Joseph Alva Magruder, of Columbia County, Georgia; grandson of George Magruder, Frederick County, Maryland; great-grandson of Ninian Offutt Magruder, Prince George County, Maryland; great-great-grandson of Ninian Magruder, Jr., of Prince George County, Maryland; great-great-great-grandson of Ninian Magruder, Sr.; and the great-great-great-great-grandson of Samuel Magruder, who was the son of Alexander Magruder, the immigrant.

RICHARD BROOKE MAGRUDER

BY EDWARD F. FISHER

Richard Brooke Magruder died at his home at Clatskanie, Oregon, Sunday afternoon September 7, 1930. He had been in ill health for some time but the end came unexpectedly while he was sitting in conversation with friends; and thus passed away one of our best beloved and most useful citizens, at the age of sixty-three years.

"Dick" Magruder, as we loved to call him, was a kindly man: earnest, sincere, genial, resourceful and public spirited. He possessed a quaint humor and originality, and an understanding of human nature that stood him well in hand in his affairs. He combined in a rare manner a pleasing modesty and an energetic perseverance which had an appeal in his contact with men. These qualities and the fact that men found him absolutely dependable brought to him a great measure of success in his work, and earned for him the love and respect he so richly deserved.

To him, more than to any other person, is due the credit for the reclamation of the swamp and tidelands along the Columbia River. Among the first to recognize the possibility and opportunity of reclaiming these lands, he devoted himself to this work with enthusiasm and untiring energy. Before the San Francisco earthquake and fire in 1905, he had labored diligently to bring owners of these lands together, and had procured options covering large areas of swamp and overflow lands in Columbia and Clatsop Counties and on the Washington side of the river. He had interested capitalists in San Francisco, and had every reason to anticipate an early realization of his dreams. But the night before the contracts were to be signed occurred the earthquake and fire, and when word reached those interested the following morning they hurried home and were unable to continue the project. Then came many disappointments to Mr. Magruder. His options expired, and he was obliged to commence all over again.

But Mr. Magruder never lost courage, and he persisted in his determination to reclaim these lands. He procured new options, interested new capital, and brought forth organizations to carry on his work. Thousands of acres were made into the most fertile lands of the world; and Magruder lived to see his dreams realized in a large measure. Magnificent fields stretched before him where once had been swamps and useless land. He chose for the site of his home at Clatskanie a beautiful spot above the Columbia highway well up in the hills adjoining the Columbia River where he could see from his windows many miles of those beautiful fields which his vision and energy had created, and where the last view of the glorious sunset through the opening where the river meets the sea made a panorama which is one of the most wonderful in the world.

Magruder never lost interest in this work, and to the time of his death was making new plans for the further development of the community. His interest in the settlers who adopted these lands was ever alive and sympathetic.

He also took a keen interest in roads and road building; and handled many contracts for building roads, particularly those relating to fills in low and wet lands. One of his last contracts was that on the Ocean View highway. He was the owner of the "Skookum," the largest clam-shell dredge on the Columbia River.

Few men in a lifetime have done more of a substantial character which has contributed to the welfare of many. He conceived and wrought successfully for others as well as for himself. The story of his eventful life, and the difficulties encountered and how he surmounted them is a tribute to his character. He has left us, but the magnificent fields will be an enduring monument to the memory of one who did so much and gave so much to the community and to the people who enjoy the fruits of his efforts.

Richard Brooke Magruder was born in Sandy Spring, Maryland, in 1867, the son of Dr. William Edward Magruder and Margaret H. Brooke. His grandfather was also a physician and surgeon. He was a member of the American Clan Gregor Society, a charter member of the Kiwanis Club of Clatskanie and of the El Kader Shrine of Portland.

Mr. Magruder left surviving him, Grace Kent Magruder whom he married July 1, 1913, and a son, Richard Kent, both of whom reside at Clatskanie; Dr. W. Edward Magruder, a brother, of Baltimore; Mary Magruder, a sister, of Sandy Spring, Maryland, and Emma Magruder, a sister, of San Diego California.

Richard Brooke Magruder was the son of Dr. William E. Magruder; grandson of Dr. William B. Magruder; great-grandson of Dr. Zadok Magruder; great-great-grandson of Col. Zadok Magruder; great-great-grandson of John Magruder; great-great-great-great-grandson of Samuel Magruder and great-great-great-great-grandson of Alexander Magruder, immigrant.

JOHN BEALL MAGRUDER

BY MARY THERESE HILL, MARYLAND

The subject of this sketch is my mother's brother, the fifth child of Thomas Magruder and Mary Clark, born January 15, 1810, at the old Magruder homestead in the Forest of Prince George's County, Maryland.

His boyhood and young manhood was passed at his father's home. At an early age he married Mary Anne Hill, my father's sister, and founded his own home, "Cherry Grove," a few miles distant from his birth-place. Their only child, Elizabeth Virginia Magruder, a bonny daughter of the old South, died in the 17th year of her age—a grief from which Aunt Mary and Uncle Jack never fully recovered.

"Uncle Jack," as he was affectionately called by relatives, friends, and acquaintances, pursued the quiet life of a country gentleman; looking after his large farm and the many interests pertaining thereto. A kind master in the old slave days, a good neighbor and a true friend, he was indeed a fine type of Christian gentleman. His happy home life was noteworthy. He and Aunt Mary began their day with prayer, and they closed their day after the same wholesome fashion as they sat in the twilight telling their beads before the night lamp was lighted. This practice he continued even after his partner had passed to the beyond.

John Beall Magruder was a vigorous figure of mind and body, and a man of sound judgment and strong intellect. His intense love of nature even in its violent expressions was a keynote to his rugged character. He loved to watch thunderstorms, and my recollections of him carry the picture of his sturdy figure, standing motionless in some sheltered place, looking at the swaying trees with the lightning playing through them, and listening for the crashes of thunder.

His opinions on large questions were sought and respected by members of his family and his friends.

As "Glenway," my father's home, was the center of family gatherings, and the place to which all interesting bits of news was brought, so "Cherry Grove," Uncle Jack's home in the Forest, was the center for disseminating these news items to his community, and always a messenger was sent post-haste that he might be apprised of happenings of interest.

Such an occasion is significant. My brother, William W. Hill, II, was dispatched to carry the news of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Arriving, breathless with excitement and hard riding, he told his dramatic news. As Uncle Jack listened attentively, realizing the mighty purport of this death, following, as it did, hard upon the heels of the surrender at Appomattox and the tragedy of the lost cause; while the melancholy sound of guns, fired in solemn requiem, came from Washington across the country through the April air, he made the remark which has become a family by-word, "You may fire your guns, but you can't wake him up."

He always took a keen interest in National, State and county affairs, and was always well posted on such matters. He was a great admirer of that grand old newspaper, "The Baltimore Sun," having subscribed to it from its very first issue. For a period of 55 years he never missed a copy, and the Editor, Mr. Edwin S. Abell, sent it to him as a compliment during the last two years of his life.

It was from Uncle Jack's remarkable memory and great fund of information that many genealogical facts about our Scotch ancestry have been made available. The Clan Gregor could not have had a more enthusiastic member had it been organized during his life time.

He was a man of unbounded charity; his heart, his purse, and his home were ever open to those who were in need, and his hospitality is a family tradition.

I remember as a small child being at "Cherry Grove" with the older members of the family, when one day a tenant from a neighboring plantation came over just about the dinner hour to consult with Uncle Jack. Although he knew it would not be wholly agreeable to the ladies of his household, his kind heart prompted him to insist that his visitor dismount and join with him at the mid-day meal. I then heard one of the family exclaim, "Just listen to Uncle Jack in his distressing hospitality." I do not remember whether or not the dinner invitation was accepted, but the expression "distressing hospitality" has stuck in my memory, and I have often thought how truly characteristic it was of him of whom I write.

Aunt Mary passed away February, 1877, and Uncle Jack remained in his own home, alone, for some years. The last ten years of his life, however, was spent in my old home "Glenway," he and my father being life-long friends and devoted companions. He survived my father by three years.

JOHN BEALL MAGRUDER

BORN JANUARY 15, 1810; DIED JULY 25, 1897

His great vigor and constitutional strength persisted. An amusing family story is frequently recalled when Uncle Jack and the good old days are subjects of conversation. It is to this effect:

Uncle Staley Magruder, a younger brother, and the bachelor among the Magruder boys, was familiarly called the "Colonel" as Uncle Jack was called the "Major." They had many jokes and jibes between themselves, and always gave one another their acquired titles when talking to or about each other. The report went out that Uncle Jack was very ill and might not survive the attack. When Uncle Staley was told, what to the family was distressing news, remembering, no doubt, the rugged physique and constitution of his brother, said: "The Major is not going to die. He will live until you have to shoot him."

Years after, when the grim last enemy was stalking around the sick bed of Uncle Jack, and he lay nigh unto death, Uncle Pat, the faithful old body servant of my father, a man old and bent with years, watching beside the ebbing life just as he had watched beside his old master when his life went out, said with deep feeling as day after day the pulse continued to beat, "Mars Staley ought'nt to have said that about Mars Jack. It looks as if it mought come true."

Vigorous and rugged indeed "The Major" was. He subsisted for fifteen days on a few drops of water, and what, in his feverish illness, he himself termed "The most abominable egg I ever tried to eat."

The passing years took gentle toll of his strength, and he quietly fell asleep on July 25, 1897.

We laid him to rest where he wanted to be—by the side of his beloved "Mary," his helpmate, in the family cemetery in the Forest.

John Beall Magruder was the son of Thomas Magruder and Mary Clark; grandson of Isaac Magruder and Rebecca Beall; great-grandson of Nathan Magruder and Sophia Baldwin; great-great-grandson of John Magruder and Susanna Smith; great-great-great-grandson of Samuel Magruder and Sarah Beall; great-great-great-great-grandson of Alexander Magruder, the immigrant, and Margaret Braithwaite.

MRS. ELEANOR ELIZABETH GREGORY OGDEN

BY JANE W. GREGORY

Eleanor Elizabeth Gregory was born on September 13, 1863 in Washington, D. C., the daughter of Edward Hull Gregory and Jane Waters.

Her early childhood was spent in Richmond, Virginia. From there her parents moved to Alexandria, Va. where she was educated at a school conducted by Dr. Penick.

She married Dr. David Marl Ogden October 19, 1904 and resided in Washington, D. C., until his death in April, 1911, when she went to Missouri where she had relatives on both her father's and mother's side of the family.

During the World War she obtained a position in the Veterans Bureau where she was employed at the time of her death.

She was a member of a Baptist church in Alexandria, Va., and during her residence in Washington, D. C., she became affiliated with the Calvary Baptist church of that city.

Mrs. Ogden was a very charming woman of strong personality, and her passing was a sincere sorrow to a large circle of relatives and friends.

MRS. STELLA PENDLETON LYLES

BY ISABEL SNYDER

(From Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society)

Stella Lee Pendleton was born November 18th, 1871, near Tallula in Menard County, Illinois, a daughter of Arthur Menefee Pendleton, born near Madison, Missouri, and Hester Hewitt Pendleton, a native of Cape May Court House, New Jersey. The family removed to Chandlerville, Illinois, when Stella was a young child, and she graduated from the Chandlerville high school at the age of fifteen years. Talented musically, she studied piano for a number of years at the Illinois Conservatory of Music in Jacksonville, Illinois, and became a very proficient pianist. Desiring to take up teaching as a profession, preparation for the work was made by a thorough course at the Normal School in Lewistown, in the historic "Spoon River" district.

As a teacher in the Chandlerville public school from 1889 to 1893, thence to Virginia, Illinois, for a period of two years in the city schools, and in 1895 to Beardstown, Illinois, accepting a position as Principal of the Second Ward School, she made a remarkable record, pupils and patrons of the various schools testifying to her rare ability as an instructor. While a resident of Beardstown, she became a member of the Eastern Star, lending willing assistance in the activities of the Order.

On June 22, 1898, her marriage to Albert Rufus Lyles, M. D., a rising young physician of Beardstown took place, and the first six months of their wedded life were spent in Chicago. In 1899, Dr. and Mrs. Lyles came to Virginia, in Cass County, where they built a beautiful home and established a permanent residence. Two daughters were born to them—Miriam Eunice (Mrs. R. W. Dunn) and Pauline Lavinia (Mrs. C. R. Lyman), both of whom are now living in Chicago.

Mrs. Lyles always devoted much time to reading and study and her influence on the literary life of the town was noteworthy. She was a charter member of both the Travelers' Club, organized for the study of people and customs of all lands, and the Dickens Reading Circle. In 1919, she was active in founding the Virginia Delphian Chapter, and, serving as its presiding officer, for many years successfully encouraged the membership in research for wider knowledge, until failing health forced her resignation. She was also deeply interested in the literary work of the local Book Fellows, and was a prominent member of the Woman's Club while her health permitted.

Mrs. Lyles had joined the Congregational church in Chandlerville at a very early age, and, upon removal to Virginia, transferred her allegiance to the Presbyterian church, in which she was a devout and earnest worker, teaching in the Sunday School with marked success.

Among her hobbies were genealogical research and all forms of history, and she was the author of numerous brilliant articles along these lines. Due to her interest in genealogy, she enjoyed affiliation with the Daughters of the American Revolution and it was her special pride that she could trace, through written records, her family history back to the time of William the Conqueror. In 1929 she was honored by admission to the "Magna Charta Dames," an organization in which membership can be attained only through lineal descent from the Barons who signed the Magna Charta in England in 1215, and she could boast of lineal descent from five of the sixteen Barons who left issue.

She left surviving her two daughters Helen Muncaster Gassaway and Rosalie Hanson Gassaway.

Mrs. Gassaway was very active in the Rockville Presbyterian Church, had a wide circle of friends, was a very hospitable entertainer, and was especially helpful in aiding the aged poor.

She was a daughter of the late Otho Zachariah and Harriet Elizabeth (Magruder) Muncaster, and had one sister and five brothers. Her one sister and four brothers survive her.

Evening and morning family prayers around the hearth-side was the strong chain in the happy union of the family and the rightful living of its members.

She was a great-great-granddaughter of Colonel Zadock Magruder, and through her grandmother, Harriet Magruder, on her father's side, was a great-granddaughter of Walter and Harriet (Orme) Magruder.

NEWS OF OUR MEMBERS

Our former Chieftain, Caleb Clarke Magruder, has been re-elected Governor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Magruder in May (1930) was voted an appropriation by the General Society of Colonial Wars, to have made a copy of George Washington dressed in the uniform of a colonel of Virginia militia painted by Charles Willson Peale in 1772 at Mount Vernon. This portrait is the earliest known of Washington. Peale, native Marylander, received some of his training from the Swedish portrait painter, Gustavus Hesslius, who was engaged in 1721 by St. Barnabas Church, Queen Anne Parish, Prince George's County, Maryland, when Ninian Magruder, Sr., was warden, to paint "The Last Supper."

The War Department has requested Mr. Magruder to loan the copy of Peale's portrait for exhibition in the replica of Mount Vernon to be erected in Paris as the United States Government building at the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition, in May, 1931. So prized is the copy that upon its return it will be hung in Arlington as the gift of the General Society of Colonial Wars.

Mr. Magruder also has interested the Order of the Cincinnati in having painted a copy of Peale's Lafayette for the companion portrait of Washington in Paris. Further efforts will be made by him to enlist patriotic societies in having copies made of various historical paintings which formerly hung in Arlington, these copies to be presented to Arlington.

Magruders and Magruder homes were visited in the vicinity of Charlottesville, Virginia. The trip totalled 9,457 miles, the peak for one day—nearly reached on other days—being 518 miles.

On June 3, 1930, anniversary of his birth, were unveiled markers on the Jefferson Davis Highway near Augusta, Ga., on the Milledgeville Road. Dignity and good taste characterized the unveiling of these boulders erected by Chapter "A" of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Augusta, Georgia. Mrs. W. W. Battey, President of the Chapter, told of the significance of the Jefferson Davis Memorial Highway, stating that "It is a great artery flowing through the Southland from the loving heart of the Daughters, and at no point shall it show stronger life than on Georgia soil."
