TOSSING THE SHEAF

GENERAL MEETING

October 16, 1965

The General Meeting of the American Clan Gregor Society opened at 9:45 A.M. in the Lincoln Room of the Washington Hilton Hotel with the Invocation offered by the Rev. Daniel Magruder.

The minutes of the Council Meeting were read and approved as corrected.

The Treasurer reported the balance on hand in the checking account and in the various funds of the Society.

The Rev. Daniel Magruder reported on the Endowment Fund and reminded the members that the original purpose of the Endowment Fund was to subsidize the cost of the Gatherings. Mrs. Blunt reminded us also of the contributions to "Angus, the pig" which also help to meet the cost of the Gathering.

The Registrar read her report and the names of new members, six of whom were present at the meeting.

Miss Hill, in giving the Historian's report asked that members notify the Historian of family events such as weddings, births, and deaths, for the records.

The Librarian, Miss Hill, read her report and displayed the new book plates. All of the Clan books have this plate in them. Mr. Bernard Magruder was given a rising vote of thanks for his gift to the Clan Library. Mrs. Blunt announced that all of the Clan books are housed at the Blunt home and all members are welcome to come at any time to read them.

The Editor received a vote of thanks from the members for her excellent work on the Yearbook. It was reported that 86 copies of the Yearbook were distributed to colleges, universities, and state libraries. It was moved and carried that the number of Yearbooks given to colleges, universities, and state libraries be included in the minutes each year. The Editor thanked Mrs. Edith Blunt for her help in producing the Yearbook.

The Budget was presented by Mr. Blunt.

Dr. R. Gregory Magruder, in reporting on the Edward May Magruder Scholarship Fund reminded members that preference is given to MacGregor descendants.

The report on the Highland Games at Grandfather Mountain, N.C. was also given by Dr. Magruder who represented the Society on the Administration Committee. The Games are growing in size each year and are the largest in the country. This year, was the first year that enough profit was realized from the Games to give a scholarship to an American student to an English College. The MacGregor trophy for tossing of the sheaf was won by a Davidson student and broke the record set last year. Dr. Magruder urged members to attend the Games.

A resolution concerning the passing of the Honorable Secretary of the Clan Gregor Society of Scotland, Mr. John MacGregor, was read and accepted.

The Chieftain thanked the members for their co-operation and remarked that he had enjoyed the Society as its Chieftain. He then reviewed the current work being done on the tax-exempt status of the Society. He urged that we work toward permanent housing for the library and records of the Society and also suggested the possibility of a scholarship in the future for a graduate student of History.

Mr. John MacGregor, a new member, and Chairman of the Scholarship Committee of the St. Andrews Society of New York, discussed the scholarship program of this organization which sends an American boy of Scottish descent to Scotland for a year of graduate study and brings a Scottish boy here for a year of study.

A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Ashby Canter for his work that contributed so much to the success of the 1965 Gathering. Mr. Blunt announced that the size of the Gathering had increased since the Council Meeting of the day before and now was the largest since the Charlottesville Gathering.

Mrs. Richardson brought an invitation from the State Deputy Chieftain of Hawaii, Mr. Lloyd Killam, to all Clan members to please call on him when they were in Hawaii. She reported that he was a most charming host and would add a lot to your trip.

A motion was made and carried that the scribe write to Mr. Malcolm Magruder expressing the Society's concern at his illness and appreciation for his contribution to the Clan.

Dr. R. Gregory Magruder was appointed temporary chairman of the meeting for the report of the Nominating Committee. The slate, as presented, was elected by a unanimous vote.

A motion was made and carried expressing thanks for the excellent work of the Chieftain, Mr. John Kennedy Magruder, and his fellow workers on the Council.

The meeting closed at 11:05 with a moment of silence in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Bubb and the Benediction by the Rev. Daniel Magruder.

MINUTES OF THE COUNCIL MEETING

October 15, 1965

The meeting was called to order at 9:50 A.M., October 15, 1965 by the Chieftain, Mr. John Kennedy Magruder, in the Georgetown Room of the Washington Hilton Hotel. The Invocation was given by the Rev. Daniel Magruder. The following members were present: Mr. Gordon Stick, Rev. Daniel Magruder, Mrs. Edith Blunt, Miss Regina Hill, Mrs. Joseph Tichy, Mr. Miller Hutchison, Jr., Miss Ellen Slaughter, Mrs. Margery Hazelwood, Mr. George Hazelwood, Mr. Bernard Magruder, Dr. R. Gregory Magruder, Mr. Harry Blunt, Miss Virginia Tyler, Mr. John Kennedy Magruder, and Dr. William Stokoe, Jr.

A motion was carried that we dispense with the reading of the minutes.

The Treasurer, Miss Virginia Tyler, reported that the income for the past year totaled $4,053.84, the expenses amounted to $3,924.10 and the balance as of October 1, 1965 is $129.74.

The Rev. Daniel Magruder reported that the balance in the Endowment Fund amounts to $4,473.60. He urged contributions to this fund to enable the Society to subsidize future Gatherings.

The Charity and Educational Fund has a balance of $59.26. The Marshall Magruder Library Fund, $309.87, and the Edward May Magruder Scholarship Fund has a book value of $2,760.00, a market value of $5,180.00. The income from this fund for the year ending June 30, 1965 amounted to $189.00. The scholarship was awarded for the current scholastic year to Charles Baltimore, a first year medical student.

The Registrar, Mrs. Blunt, reported a gain of 20 new members many of whom are attending the Gathering this year, She called attention to the revised pamphlet and asked that all members send them to interested relatives and friends.

In the absence of the Historian, Mr. Thomas Magruder, Miss Hill read the Historian's report. There has been one marriage, five births, and six deaths in the Society this year. Mr. Blunt read a letter from Commander Findanus MacGregor informing him of the death of Mr. John MacGregor, the honorable Secretary of the Clan Gregor Society of Scotland.

Our Librarian, Miss Hill, reported that the Society has received a set of very valuable books from Mr. Bernard Magruder as well as several pamphlets. The copyrights on past editions of the Yearbook have been brought up to date and the crossfiling will probably be completed by the Gathering next year. The new book plates were shown. These were made possible because of the gift of the plate by Mr. Bernard Magruder. They are on display at the registration desk and can be purchased for 10¢ a piece or $10.00 a hundred.

The Editor, Mrs. Hazelwood, reported on the cost of the Yearbook, totaling $1,176.82. The Chieftain complimented Mrs. Hazelwood on her excellent work and on the quality of the Yearbook.

The Budget, presented by Mr. Blunt, was approved.

There was no report on the Funds of the Society, as the Chairman, Mr. Herbert Magruder was not present. However, concern was expressed at the small amount of interest that the Fund was presently drawing and a motion was made and carried that the funds be moved to a reputable bank and Savings Certificates be purchased at a higher rate of interest until the principle reached $5,000.00 at which time it could be put into a Trust Fund.

Mr. Bernard Magruder, reporting for the Membership Committee said that the letters he had written had not resulted in any new members and that the best way to increase the membership was for present members to interest their relatives and friends in the Society and circulate the new pamphlets among them.

The Chieftain reported that Mr. Thomas Magruder had suggested reproducing the present geneological charts in a more uniform geneological that could be put into a book and help to preserve the information now available. Since the budgeted amount for this work was not used last year it was moved that it be kept in the budget for this year.

The Chieftain, reporting on the clarification of the Society's tax exempt status, read a letter from the lawyer engaged to investigate this. She recommended that the Society set up a new Charity and Educational Fund with at least one member of the Board of Trustees from the Society. The estimated cost for this being $2,500.00. It was moved that the Council appoint a committee to investigate amendments to the By-laws necessary to comply with the Internal Revenue requirements and present their recommendations to the Council at the meeting next year. The motion carried.

It was moved and carried that the By-laws be amended to include the name of McGehee in the list of surnames eligible to be elected Chieftain of the Society, subject to the approval of the Chief of Clan Gregor in Scotland.

It was suggested that a resolution be drawn up concerning the death of Mr. John MacGregor to be presented to the General Meeting and a copy sent to the Clan Gregor Society of Scotland, his family and a copy be printed in the Yearbook. Dr. R. Gregory Magruder was appointed Chairman of this committee. It was further suggested that our yearly contribution to the Scotland Cemetery Fund be given in his memory this year.

A motion was made and carried that the society donate from the Endowment Fund up to $10.00 a month for medicines for Miss Regina Hill who has done so much for the Society.

It was moved and carried that the Society make it possible, for a $100.00 fee, to award a posthumous Honorary membership for ancestors who would have been eligible for membership.

It was announced that the chieftain did not wish to be considered for election this year and that the Ranking Deputy Chieftain, Mr. Malcolm Macgregor, had had to resign because of ill health.

Dr. R. Gregory Magruder was appointed temporary Chairman for the report of the Nominating Committee. The following slate was presented and unanimously accepted.

Mr. William B. Hamilton Magruder .....Chieftain
 Mr. Thomas Garland Magruder ..... Ranking Deputy Chieftain

 Dr. Nathaniel Ewell, Jr. .... Surgeon

CHIEFTAIN OF THE AMERICAN CLAN GREGOR SOCIETY,
FELLOW CLANSMEN AND FRIENDS,

Fedaus McGregor

I must thank the Chieftain for the nice things he said about us and am glad he did not say too much as I am always embarrassed and do not know what to say, unlike the conceited man who said that he did not like people paying him compliments as they never did him justice.

It has been very nostalgic to hear such wonderful piping and to see the excellent Highland dancing.

My wife and I are very honoured to be your guests again and we are delighted to be back in Washington and to see so many of those with whom we made friends and who gave us such a happy time two years ago.

I seldom forget faces but, unlike my wife, I have an appalling memory for names, addresses and telephone numbers. In this connection I will let you into a secret — I am sometimes asked why I am so unfashionable as to grow a beard — well, both my grandfathers had beards and, being a lazy man, I hated shaving every morning; but the main reason was that when I retired from the Navy and became a farmer, I found the greatest difficulty in distinguishing one of my sheep from another — then it occurred to me that sheep may have the same difficulty with human beings — so I grew a beard so that they would, at least be able to recognize me!

We are very honoured that you should have so ably have sung God Save the Queen in our presence and I must admit that I felt rather foolish standing in front of you and unable to sing a word of the Star Spangled Banner, but you can hardly expect a good citizen of the Queen to know a Rebel song.

I would like to give you a little news of the Clan home. The Chief and his wife asked me to give you their warmest greetings and I know that they hope to visit you again when his duties permit. At present he is doing a Staff Course and early next year he is due to rejoin his Regiment, the Scots Guards, in command of the Battalion in Malaya.

Many of you will have heard the very sad news that our Secretary, John MacGregor, died in July. Some of you will have met him and many more will have corresponded with him. He was a tremendously enthusiastic clansman and a most energetic Secretary and the Society at home owes a great deal, to him for his achievements while he was in office. If any of you want to be repatriated and would like to carry out the job of Secretary, unpaid, please get in touch with me after the Banquet.

Now for some more personal news. Our son, Alpin, was married a week ago today to a young Baroness from Finland and I hope that one day in the future they will both visit you. The Chief's two small sons were pages at the wedding.

To go from youth to age, one of our oldest and most revered members — the Chief's and my Aunt — Mrs. Ernest Magruder — who once lived in Maryland, celebrated her 90th birthday last April. When I suggested to her that she should accompany us, she said that it was too much for her now but sent you all her love.

As you know, Sir Even, who was founder of the Clan Gregor Society and appears on the Christmas card, died in 1843 while he was Governor in Barbados; and largely at the instigation of one of the Clansmen here, Mr. Lewis MacGregor and a prominent Freemason in Barbados, we are having a Memorial Tablet made which will be erected early in the New Year in the Cathedral in Barbados. Possibly some of you may like to combine a vacation with attending the unveiling ceremony and, as soon as I know it, I will let your Secretary know the date.

Inevitably when one talks about Clan history, the Battle of Glen Fruin comes up and tonight is no exception. Since 1603 no MacGregor had stayed at Luss but last winter this record was broken when my brother stayed with Sir Ivor Colquhoun: even this was not an entirely peaceful mission because he went there to shoot pheasants. However, although Clan enmities die hard, there is no real reason why we and the Colquhouns should not forget them since our battles arose from more or less straightforward differences and not from treachery and villainy, as did our unforgettable enmities with some other Clans.

To cement our new friendship, Sir Ivor has invited my wife and me to be present at the unveiling early next year of a cairn being erected in Glen Fruin in memory of those who fell in the Battle.

Since our last visit, our nations have lost two very distinguished citizens, one old, one young, It would be impudent of me to eulogise such great men but it is significant of the close ties of our nations that their loss should have had such an impact on both sides of the Atlantic, and that the drama of their deaths and funerals should have so moved the English speaking world. Winston Churchill was, without doubt, the greatest Englishman of his age and one of the greatest of all times and his affection for America stemmed not only from his maternal connection but from his intense love for freedom.

John Kennedy was, of course, a more controversial figure because he was still an active politician and here I must tread warily because I know nothing of American politics, except the pictures I have seen of your Party Conventions. To all, however, he was an immensely courageous man, who was determined to improve the world. Neither of course were Scots, although Kennedy was a Celt and Churchill did his best by being born on St. Andrew's day.

I have spoken of them because both were passionately devoted to the cause of Peace and Freedom and they can, therefore, be an inspiration to us to use our Clan, spread as it is throughout the world, to foster understanding between the peoples and nations of the world.

No one could pretend that the Gregarach have always been an entirely peaceful influence but you will find, if you examine the facts carefully, that we were never, well, hardly ever, the initial aggressors and peace at any price is neither lasting peace nor temporary honour.

I am unfashionable enough to entirely disagree that all men are equal in all respects, or that all men can or ought to be equal. To be a MacGregor disproves this at once, and so, of course, do the two eminent statesmen I have just mentioned. But supposing this dangerous and fallacious doctrine were ever to come true, what would the world be like? Imagine if all men were Winston Churchills, Marx Brothers, or Davy Crockatts and all women Cleopatras, Lucias, Brogias or Annie Oakleys! Would it be a comfortable world and which type would you choose? Or to go to the other extreme, are all men and women to be mediocrities or even morons? Of course not, so everyone must have aspirations and conscious or subconscious ideals.

Civilised people have individual and corporate ideals, to achieve something in themselves and also to improve the lot of others. Unfortunately, many are so lofty that they are divorced from the facts of life and others are utterly misguided. Hitler had the ideal of a purer German race – the Inquisition that of one true faith, with what disastrous results. We Scots have always believed in freedom from foreign powers and freedom of the individual to be an individual. The Clansmen did not believe that they were all equal; they had their Chiefs and Chieftains but they bowed to no subservient feudal rule.

So today some people and some nations are giants, some are pygmies, some are advanced and some are backward; unfortunately all seem to think they are equally important and the lofty idealists are doing the greatest dis-service to the world by proclaiming an equality which does not, and cannot exist.

What everyone must be taught to realise is that to be small is nothing to be ashamed of and that one can be proud of one's heritage and yet play a minor part without blowing oneself up like a bullfrog. Clan Gregor lived their lives without trying to conquer all Scotland. Scots the world over have always served the nations where they settled and have proudly retained their identities without trying to take over their adopted land.

On looking back at the speeches of your guests at the last few banquets, it is surely no coincidence to find that all have emphasised the part that freedom and service play in the tradition of Scotsmen, and MacGregors in particular.

Even the coat of arms of the Chief came from our service to the Kings of Scotland. For those of you who may have forgotten the story I will repeat it. The clan arms were, and are, a pine tree erect crossed by a sword with an ancient crown on the point signifying that we upheld the King with the point of the sword. One day, of old, the King was hunting and got into trouble with a wild boar. It was not etiquette to interfere unasked so the King called out to the MacGregor chief, who was nearby, "Ee'en do and spare not". Whereupon MacGregor, evidently a mighty strong man, siezed an oak sapling uprooted it and drove off the boar. The King then granted our branch of the family the new arms with an uprooted oak tree in place of the growing pine and we took the additional motto "Ee'en do and spare not". So we have, in our two mottoes, 'S riochail mo dhream' and "Ee'en do and spare not", the proudest heritage possible – that of royal races and unsparing service.

To have two mottoes is perhaps rather extravagant; it costs more when one has the arms engraved and belies the traditional idea of Scots caninness — but then not all Scots are as mean as John and Mary.

John and Mary were an old couple and they were awfully mean, ye ken. Mary, in particular; and one night they were sitting in front of the fire and John said, “We must light the fire Mary” but Mary said, “Ye canna, think o’ the price o’ coal” so they sat a while longer. And finally John said, “I canna stand it any longer, we must licht the fire”, so Mary said, “Och Weel, we’ll licht it put we’ll no’ poke it”.

Talking of fires brings me round the modern passion for explosives, not only the nuclear bombs that everybody seems to want to play with but all these rockets being blasted into space. So far I have not yet heard of any MacGregor in space travel, but it seems more than possible that Gregarin is descended from one of the Clan who went to Russia, like so many Scotsmen in the eighteenth Century. Undoubtedly some of us will be going to the Moon or the Planets in time. Thank goodness it won’t be me.

We already have Clan societies all over the world and we must make our plans to start one on the Moon or Mars as soon as possible. I think this should be under the joint sponsorship of the Clan Gregor Society and the American Clan Gregor Society; so as soon as our new secretary is appointed, I will arrange for him to get in touch with Harry Blunt, either here or in the Moon.

It only remains for me to say once again how much we are enjoying being with you. Thanks to your generous response, I have even enjoyed the last quarter of an hour and, although I am not delegated to propose a Toast, I am sufficiently thirsty to have a drink. So: —

*I drink to myself and one other,
And may that one other be she,
Who drinks to herself and one other,
And may that one other be me.*

PIPE MAJOR EXPERT IN SILENT LANGUAGE

William C. Stoke, Jr. is not only a master of sound but an expert on silent communication. He is a talented musician and the Pipe Major of the American Clan Gregor Society. He is also one of the leading authorities on the American Sign Language, the silent manual method of talking, used today by about 250,000 Americans.

Pipe Major William C. Stoke, Jr.

The sign for Gallaudet College, for instance, is a gesture remarkably similar to taking off a pince-nez. It originated as the name-sign for T.H. Gallaudet, the man who brought to the U.S. in 1817 the idea that sign language consists of spelling out English words is a misconception, says Major Stokoe. Manual spelling is a subsystem of ASL used mostly if misunderstanding occurs and in the teaching of foreign languages.

And don't think you can't get emotional in sign language. In the notation for the sign meaning "repulsive" the dictionary says the symbols "cannot begin to suggest the physical and emotional meanings that this sign — in colloquial use — can have."

Mr. Stoke and two colleagues in the English department of Gallaudet College of Washington, D.C. have created a written alphabet for the language. They have also written a new dictionary. Although the language is 150 years old no alphabet had ever been created before.

All 3000 signs in the dictionary are ordered by the alphabet. Previous dictionaries for ASL users have listed English words and then translated them into signs with either pictures or a description of hand action and placement.

A deaf person seeing a new word had no efficient way of finding out what it meant with the old dictionaries.

The dictionary contains all the signs the authors could find in usage.

They discovered that there are distinct dialects in the language and some signs in use only in certain localities.

“AS SCOTCH AS HE CAN BE”

By Millard C. Lawrence 1381

Millard C. Lawrence

As a newspaper man I have known many authors, some of them very well. My favorite and most unforgettable was Charles D. Stewart, and despite the fact that he was more than a quarter century my senior we were good friends and companions for many years. He died in 1962 at the age of 94.

Mr. Stewart was a novelist, an essayist, a poet, a short story writer and an authority on Shakespeare. For many years he contributed regularly to The Atlantic Monthly. He was a learned scholar and he could talk backwards. He could spell and accurately define any word in the English language. At least he had never been stopped by a legitimate word in an amazing year on the old dime museum circuit before he was 21.

I must restrain myself. The temptation to talk about the gifted gentleman is strong but I'll hold it down to the story of one of his poems.

In March of 1897 Charlie was visiting his parents in Milwaukee. His mother asked him to build a fire in the furnace. He went down to the basement and put in kindling and chunks of coal in the furnace. While waiting for the fire to get going properly he sat on a crate, thinking about an adored grandfather who had never lost his Scottish burr.

The idea for a poem came to Charlie. He found a piece of wrapping paper and a pencil and before he left the basement he had written a poem. He had substituted a little girl for his own role in the story.

Here is the poem:

Her Gran'pa

*My gran'pa is a funny man,
He's Scotch as he can be;
I tries to teach him all I can
But he can't talk like me.*

*I've told him forty thousand times,
But 'taint a bit of use;
He always says a man's a "mon"
And calls a house a "hoose".*

*He plays with me most every day
And he rides me on his knee;
He took me to a picnic once
And dressed up just like me.
He says I am a "bonny bairn"
And kisses me, and when
I ask him why he can't talk,
He says, "I dinna ken."*

*But me and him has lots of fun
(He's such a funny man);
I dance for him and brush his hair
And loves him all I can;
I call him Anjrew (that's his name)
And he says I can't talk;
And then he puts my plaidie on
And takes me for a walk:*

*I tell him forty thousand times,
But 'taint a bit of use;
He always calls a man a "mon"
And calls a house a "hoose."*

CHARLES D. STEWART

The poem was printed in a Presbyterian Weekly in Chicago. Some 40 years later Charlie ran onto it in a large book entitled, "The Twentieth Century Speaker" "containing the best and noblest readings that have been presented during the last 100 years." But the title had been changed to "Scotch as He Can Be" and there was no signature.

That set Charlie to hunting and he found his poem in three more speakers. Two had changed the title. Neither had given the author credit.

In 1960 as a birthday present to Charlie I printed the poem in The Green Sheet of The Milwaukee Journal and his name appeared at the bottom in caps.

And that same year he found it in the Seattle, Wash. library in an old book of famous recitations, properly credited to him, it even gave the date of first publication.

Before Charlie passed away he said, "I never prized this poem as much for itself as for the remarkable adventures it has had."

I think all Scotsmen should prize the poem for what it is, the warm outpouring of a talented man of Scottish blood.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN

Regina Magruder Hill

The Library has received a set of valuable books given by Mr. Bernard Magruder. Several pamphlets have also been received.

Hours have been spent on the Files. These are being arranged according to subject matter and a cross reference sheet to those people or things where necessary. This work will probably be completed before the next Gathering in 1966.

(Editor Note: Miss Hill died Dec. 31, 1965)

The books given by Mr. Magruder deal with that period of Scottish and English History when most of our ancestors decided to leave and come to America.

THE McGEHEE ANCESTRAL LINE

The royal and baronial descent of McGehee through Lady Marion MacDonald, wife of Patrick MacGregor, is established. She was thirty first in descent from Alfred the Great and the Saxon Kings through Malcolm III. She inherits twenty-six generations in the line of Scottish Kings. Malcolm III with wife Princess (Saint) Margaret, daughter of Edward the Exile, unite the Scottish and Saxon royal lines. Lady Marion MacDonald also inherits through Robert Bruce and his wife, Isabelle Clair, daughter and granddaughter of Richard and Gilbert deClare, Surety Barons for the Magna Carta, who have descent from Charlamagne. (Browning "Magna Charta Barons" pp. 255-256; "Americans of Royal Descent", 1915 ed. pp. 200; "Magna Charta Barons", Vols. I and 2, pp 180-182, 190-193.)

Patrick MacGregor, born circa 1600, Lord MacGregor, was chosen Chief of his Clan in early manhood because of his qualifications of great valor and ability. Patrick MacGregor married Marion MacDonald, Lady MacDonald, the daughter of the Chief of Clan MacDonald. They had three sons - Duncan, James and John. Patrick led his clansmen under Montrose, in 1645, in support of the royal cause and so was outlawed with his sons. His estate was confiscated and his sons were "Proscribed" for one hundred years. John MacGregor Patrick's heir, became John Murray, ancestor of Sir John Murray, Baronet in 1795, and his second son, James immigrated to Virginia in 1649/50 changing his name to Thomas MacGehee and later his descendants changed the spelling to McGehee.

Articles of interest on the McGehee family can be found in Clan Year Book of 1957 pp-19-20; Clan Year Book of 1936 pp 66-79; Clan Year Book of 1937 pp 62-77.

Note - by Mr. J.H. Kennard whose ancestors were McGehees

In the statement found in the MacAlpine extract: - to the effect that the lofty boast of the MacGregors to be the noblest and most ancient of the Highland Clans is not sustained by history, I can never be convinced that the other clans would have, for centuries, acquiesced in the justice of the MacGregor motto "My race is royal" unless it had been true. I cannot conceive of a bunch of Scotchmen giving anything, not even credit to rivals. My own preference, therefore, is to stand by the motto and also to heartily second the sentiments of the MacGregor who uttered the famous sentence: "Where MacGregor sits is the head of the table."

McGHEE WINS SCHOLASTIC HONORS!

Edgar D. McGehee, Jr. son of clan members, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. He was selected for membership in the Cross Keys honor fraternity at Loyola and also the Alpha Sigma Nu honor fraternity. McGehee achieved the remarkable scholastic record while serving full time in the New Orleans police department. His major is Criminology.

JOHN REZIN MAGRUDER IN WAR OF 1812

John Rezin Magruder, son of Samuel W. and Ann (probably Claggett), was born in 1775. He had one brother, Samuel Claggett, and four sisters. Eleanor (Hagerty), Margaret Ann (Stottlemyer), Mosly (Rubel) and Heneritta (McAtee).

His father's will read, in part, "To my son John Rezin, all remaining part of 'Forest', also my part of tract called 'Goose Cap' and ½ of "RichMeadow", John Rezin to pay to my 4 daughters within 4 years of my decease the sum of 50 pounds each, gold or silver, and I do hereby especially charge the said land hereby assigned to said John Rezin with the payment of money. To John Rezin also 1 negro boy and 1 negro girl."

He married Susanna Boetler on March 24, 1799. They had five sons (Edward, Elias, Henry Alexander, Arthur and Hezekia) and two daughters (Sarah and Elizabeth.)

On August 18, 1808 he received a commission as ensign in Capt. Jacob Alexander's light infantry company attached to Regiment No. 28 Maryland militia. He served as a lieutenant in the 32nd Regiment, commanded by Col. Hook, in the war of 1812 and was honorably discharged at Baltimore on October 21, 1814.

John Rezin died in Frederick County, Maryland on December 8, 1829. He and his son, Henry Alexander, are buried in the Old Lutheran Cemetary in Middletoron, Maryland.

THE PERSECUTIONS OF THE CLAN GREGOR

by James M. Keir
(ACGS #1421)

Most of us who are members of the A.C.G.S. have some awareness of the great cruelties that were perpetrated upon the clan Gregor during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, but many do not fully understand the extreme nature and prolonged periods of these persecutions. Here is the cruel story.

Clan Gregor is definitely of Keltic origin and claims royal descent from King Kenneth McAlpine through his third son, Gregorius or Gregor, who lived about 800 A.D. The early history is but hazy, that the clan had become quite numerous and was occupying extensive territories in Glen Strae, Glen Orchy, Glen Lochy, Glen Lyon as well as along the shores of Loch Rannoch and other areas in Scotland, seems quite certain.

These areas had been held by McGregors going so far back into the early history of Scotland, that not one member of the clan could even contemplate the possibility of losing any of his estates by any means whatever. For centuries the clan lands and patriarchal properties had been held by Coir-a-Glaive (Right of the Sword) and this belief was the strong tradition of the whole clan for continuous ownership of their territories.

However, as the centuries wore on there were other forces at work which upset this ancient principle. The Stewart kings gave grants of land accompanied by royal charters to those who frequented at court and who gave the king support, both moral and military, when he required it.

The McGregors scorned such subservience and enthusiastically adhered to Coir-a-Glaive, which had for centuries preserved their unity and solidarity. Their judgement in this matter will be seen to have been unsound and fatal to the future prosperity of the clan.

We will not attempt to trace in detail the devious procedures that took the lands away from the McGregors but in the case of Glen Orchy the situation may have been initiated by the McGregor line ending with an heiress who married a Campbell. This line died out and another Campbell easily induced the King to give a charter of ownership to the Campbell. This was similar to the general pattern of usurpation practiced by the Campbells towards the McGregors.

At a somewhat later date the lands in Glen Strae were also lost to the clan and the McGregors' condition had become desperate. Their reaction was as could be expected by a courageous and warlike race. They considered that they had been robbed of their lands although all was within the law and supported by the King. Accordingly, they felt no compunction in raiding Campbell and other clan lands and carrying away cattle and other goods they considered really belonged to them. Such was the primitive state of society during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Many members of the clan were now almost wholly engaged in carrying out predatory acts since their only means of sustenance had been taken from them. Of course, many of their acts were carried out with great cruelty and there was an almost continual series of acts and reprisals. Organized prosecution on the part of government dated from 1563 when an act of Privy Council granted commission to many nobles and chiefs of enemy clans to pursue the "wicked clan Gregor by fire and sword". Such a warrant was granted to Sir John Campbell of Glen Orchy and the lieges were forbidden to provide any assistance to members of clan Gregor or to provide them with any food, shelter or clothing.

An act of unusual ferocity was carried out by the McGregors by the killing of John Drummond of Drummondernoch in 1589, a royal forrester of Glenartney. This again set the acts of persecution in motion and started another crusade against the clan.

In 1603 a historic battle increased the severity many fold. The Colquhoun clan owned the territories on the west shore of Loch Lomond. Sir Humphrey Colquhoun of Luss was chief. They were a numerous and vigorous race and for a long time had been at feud with the McGregors. Two McGregor clansmen were caught in a storm and stayed in Colquhoun country while on their way home. They sought food and shelter at the home of a Colquhoun and were refused. Being hungry they sought out a sheep which they killed, cooked and ate. They were apprehended the following day and although they offered to pay for the sheep they were summarily executed.

The McGregor chief was Alastair McGregor, who assembled as many members of his clan as he could and augmented them with groups from other clans. Under their leader they entered the Colquhoun territory and sighted the enemy in Glen Fruin (Glen of Sorrow). The Colquhouns numbered about eight hundred — about twice the number of the McGregors — and included a considerable number of citizens of Dumbarton and the Lennox, who had imagined that they were to experience a "parlor" battle at no great danger to themselves. On seeing the great number arrayed against them the McGregors hesitated to begin the fight but being assured by one of their seers that they would be successful they instantly joined battle with the Colquhouns.

The latter made serious tactical blunders and the McGregors won the day, completely routed the Colquhouns, slaughtering them mercilessly in the pursuit. They drove away the cattle and plundered the castle of Colquhoun taking great quantities of goods. It seemed a great victory but alas!! It brought on more persecutions for the McGregors than ever before.

That year Queen Elizabeth of England died and the Scottish king, James VI, ascended the English throne. He took quick action and in an act of Privy Council of 1603, the name McGregor was abolished and members of the clan who continued to use their own name were subject to the death penalty.

By the same act all those who were present at Glen Fruin were forbidden to carry any weapons except a pointless knife for eating food. A few years later death was pronounced upon any persons who were previously called McGregor if they assembled in numbers greater than four. By an Act of Parliament of 1617 these cruel laws were extended to include the rising generation who were now growing to manhood and might again revive the clan.

The enforcement of these laws were entrusted to the Earl of Athole in the east and the Earl of Argyle in the west, the latter being the implacable enemy of clan Gregor. The McGregor chief, Alastair, and such men as he could support around him, lived a desperately dangerous existence among the lonely valleys and high mountain tops, gaining their sustenance by frequent raids on adjoining clan lands. Alastair became greatly depressed seeing his clan overpowered and believed that if he could take himself out of Scotland the conditions of his kinsmen would improve. Consequently, he surrendered to Argyle on the condition that he would be conducted safely out of Scotland. Under close guard he was conducted across the border into England, a condition which the false Argyle considered complying with the conditions of surrender. He was immediately arrested and conducted back to Edinburgh where a mock trial convicted him and he was immediately executed with others of his kinsmen. During the months following, several groups of McGregors were hanged at the cross in Edinburgh after only the poorest semblance of a fair trial. Obviously, the McGregors had no friends whatever at court.

This action on the part of Argyle was one of the blackest and foulest acts of perfidy in all the long history of Scotland.

The clan was nameless and landless and being without a chief there seemed to be nothing to hold the members together. But small isolated groups existed precariously under the leadership of small local chieftains gaining their sustenance by cattle lifting.

The cruel strictures were only a part of the vicious plan to extirpate completely the whole race of McGregors. They were required to appear before the Privy Council and provide security for their good behavior. This generally required men from some other clan providing the surety needed. Those other clans were generally of the same descent as the McGregors, viz., Grants, McKinnons, McNabs and McAlpines.

Many of the McGregors were named as outlaws and it was forbidden to give any food or shelter to these marked fugitives. However, the humanitarian feeling was strong among the related clans and the records show that many Scots pounds in fines were paid by them for befriending McGregors.

Clergymen were forbidden, under the most severe penalty, to baptise any child with the name of McGregor and no legal papers could be held lawful if signed in the name of McGregor.

King James, in his vindictiveness, desired to put into effect the practice of branding the women who continued their own name followed by transportation to the colonies. There were many orphans of murdered or broken men and the King wished to hold these under restraint until the age of twelve, scourging them severely if they attempted to escape and hanging them for a second attempt. The record is not clear but perhaps humanitarian forces got to work and prevented these being put into practice. His plan to exile all Gregor children to Ireland upon attaining the age of twelve was not carried out. The children were given to other clan chiefs and lesser nobility who were in many instances enemies of clan Gregor.

Offers were made to pardon any McGregor who would bring in the severed head of another McGregor of the same importance in the clan as himself; or two, three, or perhaps four heads of men of less importance in the clan. This created a vicious temptation and while there may have been one or two cases where pardon was granted it was rumored that the heads were not McGregors but possibly Campbells, it being difficult to make strict identification after being mutilated.

Another disturbing condition for the clan that grew out of all these procriptions was the humiliation suffered by clansmen who sought refuge and the use of land from other clan chiefs. These chiefs demanded military service as part of the rents to be paid but the McGregors stoutly stood out for being marshalled under their own leaders. We will see later that their contribution in manpower gained enough respect during the Stewart rebellions to gain the right to follow their own leaders.

About thirty years after Glen Fruin these laws had become somewhat relaxed since the King's purpose, the dispersion of the clan, had been really attained. During this interval many of the children had grown up and were quietly nursing their thoughts of vengeance. In 1633, raiding parties of the clan were active in several of those counties that bordered the clan country. These depredations, of course, brought forth by the Privy Council a new series of commissions to many of the prominent families to proceed against clan Gregor with fire and sword. Very few men were taken prisoners since they preferred to fight to the death rather than to be captured. They were hunted with bloodhounds and slaughtered like wild beasts. Again in time, these efforts were relaxed except for the occasional acts and reprisals.

These conditions prevailed until Montrose assembled an army in support of King Charles I. The clan had suffered terrible cruelties and privations at the hands of these Stewart kings, but nevertheless, they came to his support almost to a man. They fought with their accustomed courage and skill in the defeat of their old enemy and his clan, the Earl of Argyle, at the battle of Inverlochy, where the Campbells suffered a resounding defeat. They also fought with Montrose at Kilsyth.

The Duke of Montrose had assured the McGregors that in view of their loyalty and devotion to the Royal family of Stewart their grievances would be fully redressed and the wicked proscriptive laws against them would be cancelled.

When Charles II was restored to his throne in 1661, in his first Parliament he ordered that these laws be entirely suspended against the McGregors. However, Charles neglected, or may have been unable, to do anything towards restoring to the clan their ancient homelands in Glen Orchy and Glen Strae.

The clan now enjoyed their new freedom for the first time in over one hundred years and this continued until the revolution. There had now come into prominence the clan Dougal Ciar, also appearing in the old records as Chere and Kere, a branch of the McGregors who had become established on the eastern shoulder of Ben Lomond and looking down upon Loch Katrine. Their home was at Glengyle and they might be considered to have been the most successful of the different branches of the clan in resisting the destructive effects of proscription. Their chieftain about this time was Glun Dubh (black knee), a nephew of Rob Roy. Their organization presented all the semblance of clanship and most likely offered much assistance to refugee McGregors, although they, themselves, had been subject to the restrictive laws.

A substantial contingent of the clan Dugal Ciar was present at the Battle of Sheriffmuir under Rob Roy but did not participate in the conflict. By this time clan Dugal Diar under Rob Roy was known to be exacting blackmail from estate owners for the protection of their herds. This was a shady undertaking and did nothing to create favor for the clan. Probably on account of this the McGregors were excluded from the general pardon that was granted in 1717 following the rebellion 1715.

From about this time onward the laws directed against the clan were being relaxed and only in the most glaring cases of violence were punishments meted out. As the century wore on there was almost no cases of enforcement and all the penal statutes against the clan were repealed in November, 1774.

Being free to act as they wished as a clan eight hundred clansmen elected John Murray of Lemrick as their chief and his descendants today occupy the position of chief by inheritance. They make their home at Edinchip, Penthshire, Scotland.

To summarize for nearly one hundred years, from 1563 to 1661, infamous persecuted the clan. A period of thirty-two years followed from 1661 to 1693 when these laws were held in abeyance but in 1693 these laws were brought into force again and continued until 1774 when they were repealed by act of Parliament.

This story is an epic, not only in Scottish history but of all human history. There have been few cases in history where any group of people have been subjected to such cruelties all aimed at their complete extirpation and these people showed such insuppressibility and the ability to rebound to full citizenship whenever the pressure was relieved. It is most amazing that after about 130 years during which the McGregor name was abolished that any of the name had survived.

For generations young people had secretly nurtured the pride of their race and were ready to resume their name when conditions were favorable.

It is fervently hoped that the same persistence and dauntless devotion to their ideals will continue to characterize the future generations of McGregor blood.

MAGRUDER-TANEY TRAGEDY: FACT AND FICTION

by Bernard F. Magruder

Walker Lewis in his recently published biography of Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney (1) retells the story of the stabbing of John Magruder by Michael Taney.

Earlier accounts reflect partisanship based on family feeling and pride rather than knowledge. Even today it is difficult to separate fact from fiction. It is clear, however, that John Magruder died of a dirk wound inflicted by Justice Taney's father, Michael, on July 1, 1819. The verdict of the coroner's jury was reported in the Baltimore Federal Gazette on July 14, 1819.

A Taney slanted version appeared in the Baltimore Sun on May 27, 1898 (reprinted in our 1936 Year Book). This version is based on a statement by a Mrs. Lydia B. Brown who received her information from her mother ("Miss" Brooke, born in 1816). She alleged that Michael resented an insulting remark made of a young lady by Benjamin Magruder. A duel was arranged but the seconds failed to load the pistols. Continuing, Miss Brooke says Magruder called Taney a name "not for me to speak", thereupon Taney stabbed Magruder and fled to Virginia even though "the whole country was in sympathy with Mr. Taney, except the Magruder connection".

Caleb Clarke Magruder, in the 1936 Year Book, points to the difficulty of believing the country was in sympathy with Taney since "he felt compelled to leave his home and pass the remainder of his days in another state". Further, the meticulous recital of details, conversations and even thoughts of the principals by a woman who was only three at the time the reported events occurred are scarcely creditable.

In any case, shortly after escaping to Virginia, Michael died as the result of a fall from a horse and his body was returned to Calvert County for burial. Judge Delaplaine in his Maryland in Law and History (2) repeats the so called "accepted tradition" that a brother of the dead Magruder opened the coffin to make certain the body was Michael's and upon assuring himself it was, battered the corpse with a stone. W.C. Barrickman, in the 1937 Year Book, challenges this and says it lacks proof of corroboration. Apparently it is based on a novel, Old Plantation, by James Hungerford, published in 1859. There a fictional Charles MacGregor, dissatisfied with his parents disposition of property, drunkenly staggered to his father's grave and shattered the headstone.

The best documented account of the tragedy is in the deposition of an eye witness before the coroner's jury. The original record was lost when the Prince Frederick Court House was destroyed by fire in 1882 but a copy appears in a history of Frederick County (3) (as well as in the Lewis biography). The deposition reads:

"The desposition of Walter W. Wiggin taken before a jury of inquisition over the body of John Magruder now lying dead in the house of Alex. Magruder, deposed and sayeth upon his oath that on the first day of July, he (this deponent) in company with Alfred Wood and John Magruder, was at Mr. Michael Taney's and dined with the said Taney and was treated politely and after dinner and a glass of wine, they all took a ride to the river, where John Magruder, Alfred Wood and myself took a bath in the river, Mr. Taney standing on the shore looking on. After bathing we all returned to the house and a conversation took place between Michael Taney and John Magruder respecting a young lady and John Magruder told the said Taney that he would oppose him. As soon as Mr. Magruder made use of that expression, Mr. Taney told him there were girls enough, and that he, Taney, had been there himself and he, (Magruder) repeated the same expression as above. Then he (Taney) arose from his chair and went into another room and from thence brought a dirk and presented it at Magruder's breast. Magruder rose from his chair and caught him by the arm and held him for the space of half a minute in a position as to defend himself and whilst he (Magruder) had him by the arm he drew a pistol. Taney made reply to Magruder that he could show pistols too. From thence Magruder let him go and he (Taney) went into another room and took two pistols out of a drawer and he (Magruder) asked Taney for one of them, which he gave him one. They both walked out of the house into the yard. Taney sayeth to Magruder, what is your distance? Any distance sayeth Magruder. Then they placed themselves about 10 or 12 feet distance from each other. Taney sayeth to Magruder, you have no flint in your pistol. This deponent sayeth to Taney, you have none in your pistol. Mr. Magruder at this time appeared to be in a good humor. Mr. Taney at the time appeared to be in a passion. Then he, (Taney) threw the pistol away and advanced toward Magruder with a dirk in his hand and stabbed he (Magruder) in the right breast. Then Magruder sayeth to Taney, you have hurt me. Taney threw his dirk away and took the pistol from Magruder and threw that away and put his handkerchief to the wound and said he was sorry for it, and took Magruder by the arm and assisted him into the house. Magruder, after getting into the house requested the deponent to go after a doctor, which he did and returned and shortly after Dr. Gantt came in and continued with him until his death, and likewise this deponent sayeth was about four hours from the time he was stabbed until his death and further sayeth not".

Thus a musical comedy type duel ended in tragedy and the passion of Taney quickly turned to sorrow and the good humor of Magruder to death.

THE GREGORS AND ALEXANDER THE GREAT

Alexander the Great!

How would you like to toy with the idea that you are a descendant of that historic character who conquered the known world while he was still a youth, and then wept because there were no more worlds to conquer?

Alexander not only united Greece and ruled the world but he started a style for men that lasted for five hundred years. When he started whipping the pants off the Persians Alexander was old enough to shave, and smart enough to do it too, and to make all his soldiers follow the clean face fashion. He made his soldiers shave so the enemy couldn't grab their beards to help slice off heads. His razor a day keeps the whiskers away style put quite a burden on the males way back before safety razors or even good sharp straight edges.

Alexander was only 23 when he died with a fever and a horrible hangover from a big night on the eve of sailing into a battle. As far as we know he had only one child, a son, born after Alexander's death in the year 323 B.C.

The chances of proving that you are a direct descendant of Alexander are remote, to say the least, and I am sure John Alaster MacGregor of Virginia who wrote a short essay titled, "The Origin of a Clan" for the Year Book of 1936, had his tongue in his cheek when he held out the possibility that all of us with a drop of MacGregor blood may speculate that we have a tiny touch of Alexander the Great blood, too. But there is some mighty interesting information in the essay. Here it is:

"I am writing this from memory, having read it in Pepper's Ancient History of Ireland about a half century ago.

"I think it is well known among the clansmen that the Scotch peoples originated from the Greeks. Pepper stated that about three hundred years before Christ, a Greek, becoming dissatisfied with the political and economic conditions of the government, took his family and migrated into Egypt. One of his sons married a daughter of the Egyptian King, Princess Scota (note the name), indicating this Greek emigrant was of the royal family of Greece. This family built up quite a clan and remained in Egypt for four hundred years and then migrated to Spain. They did not like the conditions there, so they obtained a fleet of vessels and sailed north along the European coast until sighted a beautiful green island. They sailed along the western and northern coasts and established a colony, known today as North Ireland.

"The North Irish are quite a different type from the South Irish, but a branch of that colony. Those directly descending from the Egyptian Princess, Scota, banded together under the leadership of Alpin or Gregor, meaning the Greek son. They sailed over the northern reaches of the Irish sea and landed on the coast of Caledonia in North Britain. They fought with and conquered the natives Picts, and called the land Scotia, after their royal ancestress, Princess Scota. They were known as the sons of Scota. They elected their leader as their king and he was known as King Alpin, or Gregor. His son, the second king of scotia, or Scotland, was known as MacAlpin, or MacGregor, meaning son of Alpin, or son of Gregor, or in other words son of the Greek son. Thus originated the name MacGregor with the second king of Scotland, "One third Greek and two thirds son."

"The Greek emigrant, being of the royal house of Greece, was undoubtedly in direct line of descent from that notable character, Alexander the Great, of Greece. That is probably why the name Alexander is so popular with the Scotch people."

THE CROWN McGREGOR FOUND

One of the latest histories of Scotland is by Professor Dickenson of Glasgow. The following is a quotation from his book: "Petscottie, writing in Fife in the middle of the sixteenth century, relates how a McGregor stole the crown of England at Bosworth Field, and when detected boldly affirmed that, had he got the crown away to Blair Atholl the English lords would never have seen it again."

Bosworth Field was the last battle in the war of the Roses and it is known that Richard III went into the battle with his golden crown above his helmet. He was killed and his crown rolled under a bush where The McGregor found it. The supporters of the Earl of Richmond who won the battle and became Henry VII wished to place the crown on his head upon the battlefield and instituted a search for it, which, of course, brought forth The McGregor.

Surely we can look on The McGregor with the utmost sympathy for it was natural for him to have a hankering for a crown since the McGregors descended from the Royal line.

"S' Rioghail mo dhream".

IN SEARCH OF AN AUTHOR

What manner of man was Alexander Magruder who founded the Magruder family in America?

I've searched the year books of the American Clan Gregor Society and found much fascinating information about him and his ancestors, but as a man he escapes me. I am a direct descendant, as are vast numbers of our clan, but I can't quite picture him, can't feel that I know him at all well. But I certainly admire him and have come to some conclusions. One is that some young Magruder who wants to be an author should start researching right away, planning a novel that makes Alexander its hero.

A great deal of excellent, expert research has been done by members of the clan but a writer would have to do a lot of his own to get the feeling of the times and the right way to tell the story, to make Magruder a real living human being.

To the clan Alexander is known as the Immigrant. No effort has been made to glorify him into a swashbuckling hero, even though, for centuries in Scotland the MacGregor Clan was filled with fabulous freedom fighters. He did not come to these shores seeking freedom, as millions have done. He did not come of his own free will, but as a prisoner of war.

Records show that Alexander was born in Perthshire, Scotland in 1610. It is almost certain that he was an officer in the army of King Charles II that was beaten by Oliver Cromwell's soldiers in the bloody battle of Worcester, Sept. 3, 1651. Some 14,000 were slain in the battle and hundreds captured. Alexander was shipped to Virginia by way of the Barbadoes with some 600 other Scotsmen prisoners of war.

He was indentured to someone and probably had to buy his release to become a free man. How he did this is not clear. The writer will want to know every detail of this story. What kind of men "owned" our hero? Was he kind, understanding, sympathetic? Was he willing to give Alexander his freedom, or did he want money or goods? If so how did Alexander get the money? One didn't jet over to Scotland in a few hours in those days, and certainly Cromwell wasn't ready to forgive a man who had fought against him.

Maybe Alexander earned his freedom in the few months that elapsed between the landing in Virginia and his arrival in Maryland. It is almost certain that he was ambitious, industrious, prudent, smart and a good worker and supervisor. He arrived in Maryland, probably as a freeman, in the winter of 1652 and before much time had passed he started putting plantations together. In less than twenty years he was the owner of five plantations that contained 2,400 acres. The first of his fine big farms he called "Anchovie Hills". It consisted of 800 acres on the Patuxent river. It was obtained by patent.

What did he grow on his plantations? How was the work done? How was it possible for him to make enough from his first plantation to buy others? Why did he name his beloved home plantation "Anchovie Hills?". The names of the plantations are part of the historical record because his will, probated July 26, 1677 is on file in the record office at Annapolis, Maryland. In it he devised "Anchovie Hills" to his wife "Eliz" for her life time and after her decease to sons Alexander and Nathaniel. To his son Samuel he devised the plantation "Good Luck", some 500 acres, and to his daughter Elizabeth, "Craignigh". It contained only 200 acres. "Dunblane", named for a town in Scotland, containing 325 acres, Alexander left to his sons James and John.

Alexander was at least 42 when he arrived in Maryland, probably with very limited funds, if any. Before long he was married to Margaret, the daughter of William Braithwaite, a member of the first general assembly and acting governor of Maryland. There must be a wonderful love story here. If a historian or a novelist could get all the details and tell it with inspired words he will have a best seller. There would be tears to shed, too, because Margaret died, as did Alexander's second wife, Sarah.

There is little doubt that Alexander was proud of his MacGregor blood, his royal lineage, but there is nothing to indicate that he wasn't a modest and neighborly man. He came by his love of freedom honestly. The blood of six barons who forced King John to sign the Magna Charta flowed through his veins. This document, signed at Runnymede in 1215 was the first granting basic freedoms to the people ever to be signed by a king.

Alexander also had the blood of many European Kings in his veins. His mother Margaret Campbell was a direct descendant of the Emperor Charlemagne. The genealogy, worked out by Mrs. R.S. Pope of Georgia after years of search, was printed in the Clan yearbook of 1956.

About 30 of Alexander's descendants fought valiently in the Revolutionary war and his descendants have fought in every American war since then. There have been generals and high naval officers and all ranks in all the services.

There were officers and enlisted men in the Union and in the Confederate forces of the War Between the States. Brothers fought against brothers in some Magruder families.

But back to Alexander, the Immigrant. Will some one please put him in a book, either an accurate biography, or a thrilling novel? He belongs to the world, not just us Magruders.
