COUNCIL MEETING

October 20, 1989

The Chieftain, Abbey W. Magruder, Jr., opened the Council Meeting in Room 260 of the Radisson Hotel, in Annapolis, MD, at 0920, October 20, 1989. The Chaplain, Horatio M. Richardson, delivered an inspiring invocation.

The Scribe was then asked for his report. The Scribe stated that the minutes of the 1988 Council Meeting were published in the 1988 Yearbook. There being no additions or corrections the report was adopted as printed.

The Treasurer, James E. Wolley, Jr., gave his report, which was distributed to those present. Besides typographical errors he noted that $6,000 in scholarships should be deducted from the total expenditures listed on the next to last page. The Yearbook will carry a corrected version. The report was accepted with thanks for the obvious effort and detail.

The Registrar, Fran Browne, reported a total of 28 new members since the last Gathering, i.e. 24 lineal members and four associate members, of whom one entered as an Associate Life Member. There were ten new Junior members, a record. One lineal member became a Life Member.

The Registrar and the Chieftain presented the case of membership for Frank Gudger for Council decision. It is tradition within the Gudger family that they are descended from the McGregors. Although documentary evidence is lacking or second-hand, the Council voted to accept the application for membership. Since, in some cases, the decision on membership has been delayed so long that the check submitted with the application is no longer accepted by the banks, it was agreed that future applicants would not be asked to pay their dues until the application had been accepted.

Helen Garrett, the Historian, reported that, since the last Gathering, 10 births, 6 marriages, 9 deaths of members, and five deaths of relatives of members had been reported. As usual, it is expected that further details will be reported during the 1989 Gathering. Final details will be in the Yearbook.

The Editor of the Yearbook, Maggie Gregg, reported that although Hugo, the Hurricane, had damaged the Nelson Printing Co. it is still in business. She apologized to Peg Tichy for having erred in placing Joe Tichy's name on the article written by Peg. A correction will be printed in the next Yearbook.

Mason Lummis, the Librarian, reported on the receipt by bequest from the J. K. Smith Estate of old Yearbooks. He has also visited the new repository of the library in Woodbridge, VA. No progress has been made in finding a new location in the Washington area for the library although every possible lead has been followed. Space is tight, thus expensive. The only possibilities have been unacceptable because the willing institution wished to absorb the Clan Gregor materials into existing collections of genealogical materials, thereby causing a loss of identity.

Pat (Howard T.) Bierer reported for the Trustees that the John K. Magruder Scholarship Fund had given a scholarship of $1250 to John Davis, a nursing student. The Edward May Magruder Fund had provided four scholarships at the University of Virginia in medicine to: Mark Goldstein, John F. Strazzulo, Anthony Meran, and William H. Orman. The University had not awarded any scholarships for some time and was, therefore, able to give out four awards this year. A total of $15,000 was awarded, leaving $6000 in the income account.

Joe Tichy reported on details of the John Kennedy Magruder Fund which, with the final delivery of payments on the mortgage of property under the estate, will exceed original estimates. He reported that most colleges would prefer to merge gifts in their general scholarship fund, but that the ACGS is holding out for the identity of the funds.

The Assistant Chieftain, Joe Tichy, gave his report. The ACGS now has 574 members, of whom 520 have paid their dues. There are 39 junior members. He thanked those who had made the Annapolis meeting possible. In presenting the budget for next year, he pointed out that much of it was guesswork and that often the amounts budgeted would not be used.

Next year the Gathering will be held in Santa Rosa, California, to coincide with the 125th anniversary of the Santa Rosa Highland Games. The planning is mushrooming. Distinguished visitors are expected. The Clan Gregor will be the "honored" clan and Sir Gregor will be the "honored" chieftain. Our band will be present as the official band and will not compete. It will provide entertainment for the games as well as our Gathering, which will take place on August 30 to 31 so that we can all participate in the Games that weekend. On completion of the report, the Chieftain congratulated Joe and Peg on the yeomanly work they have done.

The Chieftain gave his annual address:

"It is my great privilege to serve you as your Chieftain and to work with the dedicated men and women who guide our Society. The goals of the Society were established by the Council and the membership. This report is to inform you of our progress since the last Gathering.

"To further our goal of building a national organization we continue to meet in alternate years away from the Washington, DC, area. This year we are in Annapolis; in 1990 in Santa Rosa, CA, at the Round Barn Sheraton. Our attendance has been good. Our policy has been good, and I recommend it be continued.

"To sharpen the focus on our history and genealogy we will have a genealogical workshop after lunch on Saturday. As we expand our membership we increase our information base through the data provided on application forms. This information is printed in the Yearbooks.

"Our membership is expanding and we are strengthening the state units. We have gained 28 new members, including two life members, four associate members, and ten junior members. Our policy of meeting in new areas of the nation is attracting additional members.

"To improve the communication between members we have established a Clan Newsletter to help our membership communicate with one another. The Yearbooks continue to inform our membership.

"To increase our treasury, we urge all members to become Life Members. The interest income from our Life Membership Account is growing. We encourage our members to have their spouses become Associate Members, and to remember the Society in their wills.

"To strengthen our relations with the Clan Gregor of Scotland we have encouraged all our members to join their Society. We spent $500 on a wedding gift for Malcolm MacGregor and his bride, Cecilia Campbell.

"Efforts to establish an American Clan Gregor 'Archives (Library) and Visitor Center' in the Washington area continue and will be continued. We need a home for our Library as a first step where it will be convenient for our membership to do genealogical work.

"Thus I end my report on our progress toward the seven goals established during the chieftainship of Dr. Russell C. McGregor and other chieftains before him. Some of the goals are being met; others are not possible at this time."

Turning to Old Business, Bill McGregor reported on the Scotland trip and what he learned about the Scottish Clan Gregor Society. In a nutshell, Sheila MacGregor no longer holds any office, nor does her American representative, Margaret Frost, whose resignation was accepted; but Sheila retains physical possession of the Center and assets which may lead to law suits! The ACGS still recommends that its members join the Scottish Society.

Lou McGregor reported for the Cookbook Committee that many recipes have been received and that more are wanted. Only 57 plus advance purchases have been made, and more are desirable but the Committee has $800 in the bank so it can still move forward toward the new publication. The cookbook will not, unfortunately, be ready by Thanksgiving as hoped but should certainly be ready in time for the various Games next summer and the Santa Rosa Gathering.

Joe Tichy and Mason Lummis reported on the advances made towards computerization of the Clan Gregor genealogical records. Mason had recommended to Jim Alensworth, who is our computer expert working on the project, that he look into a software item put out by the Mormon Church called Personal Ancestral File and Jim reported to Joe Tichy that this is the way to go and that it will be a unique contribution.

NEW BUSINESS:

The ACGS has been asked to let its members know that Rep. Marella has introduced a bill into Congress for the establishment of a Scottish American Day and we are urged to write our congressmen in support of the bill.

An amendment to the by-laws was introduced to give a legal basis for the Edith and Harry Blunt Scholarship Fund which has been established for children of Clan Gregor members:

ARTICLE VII

Add Section V to read as follows:

Section V. Harry and Edith Blunt Scholarship Fund

Subsection a. Purpose. A Scholarship Fund of the Society shall be known as the Harry and Edith Blunt Scholarship Fund and shall be maintained for the purpose of using the income therefrom for the payment of a scholarship or scholarships to children of members of the Society.

Subsection b. Operation. A Scholarship Committee, appointed by the Chieftain, shall review applications and make recommendations to the Trustees concerning recipients. The Trustees shall determine the amount of each scholarship and submit the names and amounts for each recipient to the Council for approval.

The Amendment was approved. A Committee will be appointed to establish criteria and procedures for the selection and awards of scholarships. The Amendment is purposely vague and the parameters will be established by the Committee.

The Assistant Chieftain asked for a transfer of funds from the Band Fund for the support of the band's trip to Santa Rosa. $4500 was approved. The Council also approved a fund drive for the Blunt Scholarship Fund.

The Nominating Committee report was presented by Bill McGregor:

The Meeting was declared adjourned and the Chaplain delivered a benediction.

GENERAL MEETING

October 21, 1989

The Chieftain, Abbey W. Magruder, Jr., opened the General Meeting in the ball room of the Hotel Radisson Annapolis at 9:15 AM, October 21, 1989.

The Chaplain, Rev. Horatio M. Richardson, gave the invocation.

The Scribe, McGregor Gray, read the minutes of the Council Meeting of October 20, 1989.

The Registrar, Frances Browne, gave her report and introduced those new members present and those attending for the first time. In conclusion she emphasized the decision of Council that new applicants should not send their dues until they have been accepted as members.

The Historian, Helen Garrett, gave her report in full. It will be published in the Yearbook. She concluded with thanks to those who have submitted information of historical importance to the ACGS.

The Editor, Maggie Gregg, reported briefly on her activities. She asked that members who send her photographs make sure to include their names and addresses, and, more importantly, tell her who the people in the pictures are. The date of submission of materials for the Yearbook is January 1, 1990.

The Assistant Chieftain noted that his report to the Council had been included in the minutes of the Council Meeting read by McGregor Gray. He wished to thank publicly the members of the committee which arranged the Annapolis Gathering, Martha Boone, Betty Dorsett, Jane and Merrill King, and Mary Passano. Their efforts made the gathering a success. He announced the establishment of the John K. Magruder scholarships, one in his name at the University of Virginia, and the other in his sister's name at Randolph Macon College. Each school received $35,000 in November and recently $6,000 was added to each. There is still approximately $60,000 due from the estate which will be added to the scholarships. He noted that Sir Gregor and his wife, Fanny, will be at the Santa Rosa Gathering next year, Thursday and Friday, and the Games, Saturday and Sunday. Labor Day is Monday giving members a free day to fly home. Sir Gregor is "Master Mason", Grand Master of Scotland. Therefore, the California Masons are eager to wine and dine him while he is here, thus relieving us of some of the obligations of their visit. The ACGS estimated cost of $1500 for their visit will be covered by the appropriation from the Band Fund approved by the Council. The fund is well capable of handling the requirements of hospitality. He concluded by announcing the events of the day and transportation provided by the Hotel.

The Chieftain underlined the assistance provided by the Assistant Chieftain before delivering his address. He underlined the goals of the leadership of the Society and proposed the membership of the Nominating Committee for the coming year, William E. McGregor, L. Burns Magruder, and Joe Tichy. These nominations and the nominations for Officers of the ACGS for the coming year were approved by the general membership. A meeting of the State Deputy Chieftains after the General Membership Meeting was announced.

The Chieftain declared the Meeting adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
McGregor Gray, Scribe

Martha Elizabeth MacGregor Chaffiot

Martha Elizabeth MacGregor Chaffiot, Clan no. 1784, widow of Emanuel Remi A. Chaffiot, died November 22, 1988, at the age of 96, at her home in Rockledge, Florida.

Martha was of that branch of MacGregors whose name was changed from Magruder by an 1821 Act of the Maryland Legislature. The tenth child of John Francis MacGregor and Florence Ellen Wallace, she was born August 15, 1892, on the Prince George's County, Maryland, farm of her paternal grandparents Nathaniel Mortimer MacGregor and Susan Euphemia Mitchell MacGregor. Her birthplace was Grampian Hills which was part of the Dunblane tract patented in 1671 by her ancestor Alexander Magruder.

Along with her mother, two brothers and several sisters Martha attended the 1909 founding meeting of the American Clan Gregor Society. She was proud of her Scottish ancestry and went on the 1975 MacGregor Bicentennial Pilgrimage to Scotland to celebrate restoration of the MacGregor name.

Martha was graduated from high school in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1911. When the family moved to Chevy Chase, D.C., she attended Central High School there for one year prior to accepting employment with the Federal Government in 1913. She worked for a few years in the U.S. Lighthouse Service, but most of her forty-year career was with the Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, from which she retired in 1954.

She met Emanuel Remi A. Chaffiot while she was working in the U.S. Lighthouse Service and married him on October 21, 1921, in Baltimore, Maryland. After her husband retired in 1957 they moved to New Smyrna Beach, Florida, where he died August 1, 1973. Martha later moved to Rockledge, Florida, to be near her son. Her sister, the late Mary Roberta (Bobby) MacGregor Etheridge, Clan no. 1785, lived with Martha until her death on March 7, 1987. (See p. 40, 1988 Year Book of the ACGS.)

Martha is survived by her son Robert Remi Chaffiot and three grandsons, Robert Jr., Mark and Victor, and a great-grandson, Eric Remi Chaffiot. As the last of eleven MacGregor children, Martha leaves many nieces, nephews and cousins who are members of the American Clan Gregor Society.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE 1989 GATHERING

Virginia Grier

What better place for the Clan Gregor to gather than Annapolis, with much of its Colonial charm intact and all the modern comforts of the Radisson Hotel? This busy 18th Century port may have been the first glimpse of their new homeland for some of our ancestors!

The torrents of rain that accompanied our early arrival on Friday had subsided to a Scottish mist by Noon, when we set out afoot for historic St. Anne's for our memorial service. The former Chapel Royal of Maryland, this is the third structure to be built on Church Circle. Some familiar faces were missing as we filed into the church. Our faithful Piper, Dr. Stokoe, could not be there because his wife was ill, so it was a silent procession, led by Chieftain and Chaplain, which followed the pine wreath with its nine white carnations and solemnly placed it on the tomb of Margaret Carroll, 'relict of Charles', in St. Anne's Churchyard. How good it was to have the Rev. Ray and Margery Richardson with us this year!

Crossing the street to Reynolds Tavern, we enjoyed a festive luncheon, served in authentic Old Maryland atmosphere and topped off with the best-ever chocolate mousse.

Our afternoon walking tour included State House, the William Paca and Hammond Harwood Houses, all within a few blocks. These two homes are examples of the elegant townhouses built by local planters for their entertaining in the Golden Age of Annapolis, pre-Revolution. The Paca House, with its beautifully restored two-acre pleasure garden, was of particular interest. Its furnishings include the typical painted floorcloths of the period and a superb 'tall clock' from the collection of Mr. Edward Passano's father, a gift to Historic Annapolis, Inc. – there it stands in one of the parlors, a fine piece of American craftsmanship. We had learned of Mr. Passano's generosity over lunch with his family, 'regulars' at our gatherings.

Visitors to Scottish-Irish Imports had mixed reactions to the news that this Annapolis fixture is going out of business – glee over the bargains we found at the closing sale and sadness that the shop will not be there in the future.

At Friday evening's ceilidh, four midshipmen from the Academy Chorus entertained us with barbership-style harmony, first introducing themselves as MacGregors, later confessing their real names. Delightful as the young men were, John Masterson topped their act with Scottish ballads as only he can sing them.

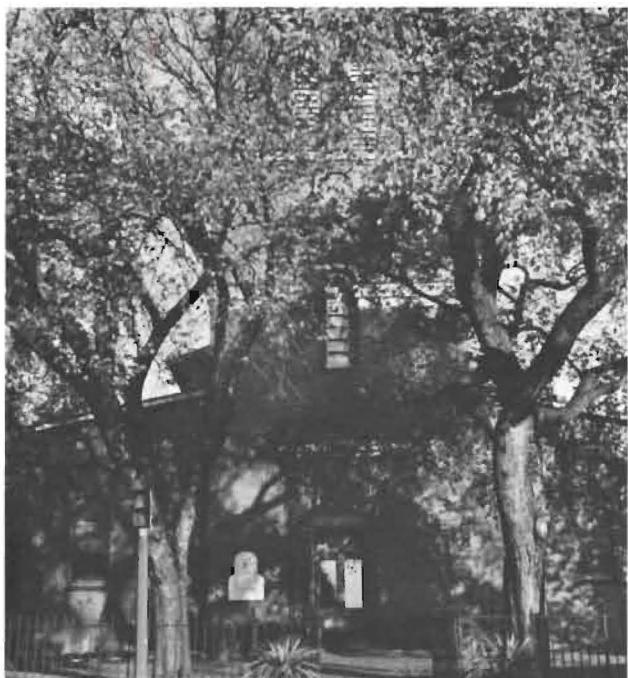

Following Saturday's general meeting and luncheon, the clan trooped off to a pipe band concert, pipers and Highland dancers performing for passers-by and our group assembled in Lawyers Square. Plenty of raincoats and umbrellas were in evidence but again the threatened showers held off for these festivities.

Did I sense the spirit of Judge Hugh Campbell, beaming approval on the Address to the Haggis as rendered in the best Burns tradition by Bill Garrett at our banquet? It was exciting to get caught up in the enthusiasm of first-timers among the 145 Gregors gathered in Annapolis as the familiar pageantry unfolded: The piping-in of officials; the toasts – including the tribute to Miss Eunice Haden on her 88th birthday; introduction of guests; the gracious comments of Abbey Magruder, presiding over this 80th Gathering; the splendid kilted gentlemen, the elegant ladies, the grand entertainment – John Masterson again casting his spell. Old and new friends promised, "Next year, next year!" as the ringing strains of Auld Lang Syne brought the evening to a glorious close.

A STORM NAMED "HUGO"

Thomas and Margaret Gregg

Webster defines a hurricane as "a tropical cyclone with winds of 73 miles per hour but rarely exceeding 150 miles per hour that is usually accompanied by rain, thunder, and lightning." "Hugo" went far beyond those limits. Born west of the Cape Verde Islands, his journey took him over St. Croix, Puerto Rico, the southeastern Atlantic coast, up I-77 over North Carolina (Charlotte had considerable damage), West Virginia and Ohio. Before his fury was spent he had reached as far north and east as Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The magnitude of disasters like "Hugo" and the earthquake which followed soon after in California is difficult to describe. Each had its own kind of devastation, and during each the human response was magnificent. Here in South Carolina the damage was widespread. Losses in the timber industry were catastrophic. The revenue from some 6.7 billion board feet of lumber was lost to the economy and a similar degree of damage affected forests throughout the state. The extent of the loss to the fishing industry because of salt water incursion into the marsh lands, the spawning habitat for coastal marine life, may take quite a few years to assess. Now, in early April of 1990, the economic picture in South Carolina is slowly improving. What we do have going for us is a strong and positive attitude. It works!

Our personal adventure with "Hugo" began the week of September 17, 1989, as hurricane advisories became increasingly threatening. On Wednesday, the 20th, Isle of Palms residents were advised to prepare their homes and be ready to leave the island. That evening there was no doubt "Hugo" was coming. We called our children, told them we would be with Laura over west of the Ashley River and then set to work making preparations. By mid-morning on Thursday we had done all we could. The coolers were filled with emergency rations which, along with several gallons of bottled water and a suitcase, we loaded in our trusty van. With a last look around we cut off the main switch and joined a few thousand other evacuees. Our son-in-law, Verne Pulling, had left Atlanta very early Thursday morning to assist us in securing the house, but by the time he reached the Charleston area no one was allowed over the causeway connecting Sullivan's Island and the Isle of Palms to Mt. Pleasant. He booked a room at the Airport Holiday Inn and called us at Laura's. When Laura's neighborhood was evacuated, he got rooms for us there. A bit later three more friends had joined our group and by 6:00 PM the Inn was filled to capacity, plus! The staff deserves high praise for caring and competent service under harrowing conditions. From the youngest to the oldest, guests tried to be cooperative. The four bridge players in our group decided a few games would help pass the time. They did, until the lights were cut off.

As the hours passed "Hugo" picked up speed and by 9:00 PM was over the South Carolina coast. The rain and wind began in earnest then and utilities were shut off about 10:30 PM. By 12:01 AM, Friday the 22nd, the "eye" of the storm was directly over the Charleston area. It was so still it was eerie. The sky was exceptionally clear and stars sparkled with rare brilliance. Because of the extreme low pressure ear-popping was a necessity . . . the same as when an airplane suddenly drops a few thousand feet. As the "eye" passed wind speeds resumed rapidly and on the navigable side were clocked from 135 mph gusting to 165 mph. On the dangerous side they were reported well beyond 185 mph.

Friday morning did come and people began emerging to see what had happened. The Inn had some damage and a few cars had had their rear windows blown out during the low pressure period. At the nearby State Highway Patrol Headquarters some 50 Ford patrol cars were also missing their rear windows. The "really big news" was that none of the families from Sullivan's or our island could go home. The Ben Sawyer Bridge was sitting catty-wampus in the Inland Waterway and traffic over the Cooper River Bridge to Mt. Pleasant was prohibited. When we learned that I-26 had been cleared to Columbia and that the roads to our friends' homes were passable, we set out for Atlanta.

In about two days word went out that ferry boats were running to the two islands and on September 28th Tom and Verne went back to Charleston. Only two members of each family could make the two-hour visit and the sights were not pleasant to behold. Both islands looked like the aftermath of an artillery bombardment. The wonderful sand dunes, where children had gaily raced up and gleefully rolled down, were gone. Most trees were either decapitated, uprooted or fallen, and the amount of debris that had flown or floated throughout the area was truly unbelievable. Even so, there were some oddly amusing sights. For example, our yard was host to our neighbor's large sun deck on which was a huge potted geranium in full bloom. In another spot sat an old beer cooler painted a ghastly pink. Further along were two badly bent window frames from, we think, a new house about a mile down Hamlin Creek. Added to this general mess were our own broken tree branches, as well as several chairs from what once was the beach front motel and a goodly supply of broken lumber from neighboring docks. Of the trees in our yard, only the two golden figs we planted some 24 years ago survived without severe damage. The other eighteen trees (pine, live oak, pin oak and palmetto) looked like a surrealist painting. This past week we lost three of the pine trees because of damage from the salt water. There is good news though. Green leaves are bursting forth on what few branches are left on those once beautiful old trees. Even the birds and squirrels seem less agitated. It has been very hard for them to find nesting places. In that respect, we were fortunate. We could live upstairs. Many families did not have homes to return to and many others are still living in temporary quarters until their homes can be repaired.

Although the yard and shed were in a shambles, the house did not suffer structural damage. The first floor took in 38" of salt water and everything in its path either floated or was toppled leaving a sodden, mud-encrusted and smelly mess. All Tom and Verne could do was clear a path to the stairway, throw out a little of the debris, get rid of spoiled food in the freezer, pack some needed clothing and run back to catch the ferry.

When Ruth called to say progress was being made getting the Ben Sawyer Bridge back in place, we left Atlanta October 6th and headed for her home in Mt. Pleasant. In about four days, with a barge on each side serving as support, the bridge was safe for one-way traffic. We hated to face the smelly mess but, being of strong Scot's heritage, home we went. It was not until just before Christmas that the Ben Sawyer once again became a swing bridge. All that time the State Highway Patrol had officers directing traffic on each side. Their patience and skill handling thousands of cars, trucks and anxious residents was remarkable.

Repair work on our house began in early December. It is now the second week of April, 1990, and our contractor has about three days work left. Except for a few pieces of furniture worth refinishing, almost everything else on the first floor is new. "Hugo" wrecked the flooring, panelling, heating/air-conditioning, washer and dryer, electrical outlets, doors and hardware. We also have an almost new shed in the yard . . . the contractor was able to use the concrete slab and roof from the old shed.

Without the help of our children, we would not have been ready for the contractor in December. Alan came in early October to scrub out mud, replace torn screens, make temporary repairs to the downstairs front and back doors, rig a temporary telephone hook-up and stay here so we could attend the Annapolis "Gathering". To him and to Michelle and Ian for the gift of their vacation days, thank you! Verne set about propping up the collapsed shed (a real safety hazard just waiting for a small and curious boy to explore). Jane spent the hours washing salt water residue off furniture, cupboards and other items below the 38" level. To Jane and Verne for sharing their Thanksgiving holiday with us, thank you!

Those of us in the Low Country owe an enormous debt of gratitude to the thousands of volunteers whose immediate response to the disaster named "Hugo" has no equal. To the electric, gas and telephone company technicians, the National Guard and other law enforcement agencies, the emergency and disaster organizations, The Army Corps of Engineers and the various civic administrators, all of whom worked around the clock to maintain order and keep things going, a hearty "Well Done and Thank You!" Although the battle toward recovery is far from over, you gave us a good start.

Recovery has been and will continue to be slow. However, if you add up all the damage to our island and to all the other communities hit by "Hugo," what has been accomplished so far is amazing. The storm literally created mountains of debris. Over 80% of the 3,300 dwellings on the Isle of Palms suffered considerable to very severe damage. Of that number some 200 have been or are being demolished as unsafe for rebuilding. Sullivan's Island suffered comparably.

There are many unusual stories and these we know of personally. One woman's vacation home was, quite simply, blown completely away. When she and her son went there, where the front steps had been, they found a ring her husband had given her shortly before his death. Not only that, about a block further on they found a case of Scotch whiskey (it had been stored in the cottage) and only one bottle was missing. With a wonderful sense of the ridiculous her only comment was - "Son, your father must have been here!" Another acquaintance, heaven knows why, put her antique china on her dining room table. It floated down a few steps from the dining alcove, through the living room and out into an enclosed porch . . . not a dish broken. The yard of friends of ours on Sullivan's Island was the resting place for someone else's cottage. When Al saw a man standing well back from the cottage examining it, he went out to check. Somewhat unpleasantly the man said that Al now had the problem of getting rid of it. By law, as long as the owner had not touched the cottage, it was Al's property. Since Al and Mona's home is only a short block from the ocean, they suffered much greater damage than we did. In searching for missing items they found their dryer, with the clothes still in it, some three blocks over on another street. A former neighbor, who moored his boat in front of his home on Hamlin Creek, found the boat about four miles down the creek on the bank of the causeway not far from the Ben Sawyer Bridge. Several houses which were blown off their foundations and set down in the middle of a street presented an equal and different problem to the governments of both islands, as well as to the State Highway Department.

In greater or lesser degree these stories have hundreds of duplicates. Our prayer for 1990 and onward is a simple one. "Please, dear Lord, no more "Hugo's."

A REPORT FROM EARTHQUAKE COUNTRY

Pauline McGregor Johnson

Every section of the United States has something or other that makes it a little less than Paradise. In the Northwest, a land of towering mountains and evergreen pines, it rains. I've heard that in Seattle last year four hundred and ten people fell off their bicycles and drowned. The Southwest is stark, magnificent and dry; it also has winds that can move not only sand, but brick-size rocks. The Midwest is flat, with cold winters, hot summers and tornados. The North has mountains but lots of sleet, snow and blizzards. The Eastern Seaboard tempers decent weather and pretty scenery with hurricanes. However, California is an Eden of near-perfect weather; never too hot or too cold, and it only rains at night. But every Eden has its serpents and every Camelot its faults.

Whoever coined the phrase "terra firma" didn't live in California. Unless, of course, he meant "the less firm-a, the more terror." What they don't tell you is that California is honey-combed with earthquake faults, and one or another of them is shifting constantly. In this, the first week of February, 1990, there have been eighty-six earthquakes in Central California. Only fourteen of them have been over a 2.0. That's the lowest a very sensitive person in the proper position can feel. (Proper position: sitting down on the ground, very quietly waiting.) If you're busy, working, walking, knitting, reading – anything – you don't even notice a 3.0 as a rule. There have been six of those. There have been five reported at a 4.0 or better. At this magnitude most people notice the movement and weak structures can be damaged. Anything over that is usually referred to as "a good one." One of these, a 4.2, was an aftershock of "The Little Big One" on the San Andreas Fault.

Officially, the October 17, 1989, fracture of the San Andreas Fault is called the Loma Prieta Quake, named after the peak nearest the epicenter. Because we have expected a "Big One" for some time, and this one wasn't quite as big as we expected, most people call it "The Little Big One". The San Andreas is only one of our better-known faults, but not necessarily the most active or the most dangerous. Californians tend to become a little blasé after awhile, even those who live within a few miles of the San Andreas. The house creaks and rocks, and the chandelier sways with an unmistakable roll, so you glance up and say: "Humm, I put that at about a 3.5," to which your companion replies: "Seemed more like a 4. to me." And both of you go back to your reading. Generally, the news media only reports quakes over a 4.0, so sometimes the minor question is never solved.

One upsetting thing (read terrifying) about earthquakes is there is never any warning. With tornadoes, hurricanes, tidal waves and other disasters, there is at least a little time to prepare yourself for an onslaught of nature. Not so with an earthquake. It is just THERE! BANG! No hint. No warning. Nothing.

I have talked with people who seem to have some sort of affinity with the earth. They say they have a few seconds premonition of a quake. They feel a little queasy, almost sea-sick, and will reach for a doorway or table to steady themselves. Strangely, all these are women, and of the blood. I cannot explain it. No more than I can explain why every MacGregor woman I've ever met, given her "druthers", would live near running water. (I've always suspected a selkie lurking amidst our stalwart ancestors).

The late afternoon of October 17th was clear, with a slight breeze from the southwest. There was none of the so-called "earthquake weather," which is a cloudy, oppressive stillness and unseasonable warmth. Those weather conditions are said to have persisted several days before the earthquake and fire that destroyed San Francisco in 1906.

By the by, it was the fire that really decimated the City. Old San Franciscans rarely refer to "The Quake," but to "The Fire."

We live four crow-flight miles east of the San Andreas, and about ten miles north of the epicenter at Loma Prieta. The first shock hit the southwest side of the house with the repercussion of an explosion. It was the sort of thing that brought one straight up out of the chair, bad knees and arthritis forgotten. It takes only a nano-second for a veteran Californian to distinguish between earthquake and explosion. The rolling "S" waves hit almost immediately. They came so close on the initial blow, and were so strong, that my next thought was "There goes Our Own!" We have a little fault within a half mile of our house that has no real name. We've always called it "Our Own." Interestingly enough, three days after The Little Big One, our little fault cut loose with three quakes, all within a five hour period. These, a 3.5, 4.5 and a 5.0, were not considered after-shocks, but separate quakes because they were on a different fault. Sympathy, perhaps.

A funny thing – while we don't think about earthquakes all the time, they are always expected. We don't dwell on them, but when they happen, our first reaction is: "Oh, there it is." Just as if we'd been waiting for it. Rather like when the second shoe drops, or when you see Great Aunt Hattie coming up the drive in full battle array.

"Boy! There's a good 5.," I said to myself as I grabbed for my breakfront. These top-heavy articles of furniture are supposed to be bolted to the wall, but we've never gotten around to it. Every quake in the last ten years has found me holding up the top section of my 1840 Austrian prize, guarding the original stained glass doors.

I held on as the massive oak and I seemed to waltz all over one end of the kitchen. Later I found that the top had shifted some, but the base had moved out from the wall only about four inches. At the time I could have sworn we covered all seven feet of floor space. I could see my car outside, and the phone and power lines in a mad dance over the driveway. I decided I'd better remember how to move a live wire before I went out the back door. The car was bounding around like an infuriated two-year old. This is no lightweight foreign job, but a full-size Lincoln, and – and so help me – it moved a foot up, a foot over and then two feet back. And kept it up! This quake didn't die down after the initial shock as they usually do, but kept getting stronger and stronger, and longer and longer. It lasted forever. It seems that way when you're trying to keep something that outweighs you on the west wall and it wants to go east.

The quake was officially timed at fifteen seconds. It's amazing how much you can think, hear, notice and pray in fifteen seconds. And the sounds are dreadful. First, there is a dull roar from the earth itself. It's rather like a distant subway train or the sea, muted through layers and layers of rock. Add to that the sounds of things coming down and breaking. The pictures, glassware, vases, bricks from the chimney, anything that isn't tied down falling, crashing, splintering and the agony of the house timbers, twisting and groaning.

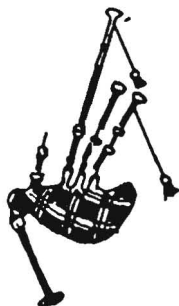

Earthquakes are horridly solitary things. So often one is alone and must react to the individual and immediate situation. And there is so little one can do. You can't stop it. You can't control anything, and it's over so quickly that you really didn't have time to think. You are pretty much alone. You don't know, beyond what you can see of the neighborhood, how the rest of the world is affected. Your power is out, and the telephones should be left to real emergencies. After all, you know it was an earthquake, you're alive, the house isn't on fire, you aren't hurt and your grown family will get through to you when the furor is over. So you do the important things: turn off the gas, as fire is the worst hazard now; check your emergency supplies to make sure they're not buried or destroyed (the car trunk is the best place, and it's fine); reassure the neighbors who are from England and this was their first; assess the damage and set about picking up the worst.

The quake hit at a few minutes after five, and by nine o'clock that night we had power and were able to pick up a San Francisco and San Jose tv station. We were appalled to discover how strong the quake had been. It hadn't seemed so big, and we were closer to the epicenter than San Francisco. The media was almost hysterical on two areas – the Marina in San Francisco and the Oakland freeway collapse. Both were tragic disasters, but the impression was that these were the only areas affected. There was no mention of the smaller towns, Watsonville, Santa Cruz and Saratoga that were severely damaged, or of the thousands of homes in the Santa Cruz mountains that were completely destroyed. Afterwards a lot of residents resented the news coverage, or rather the lack of coverage. In an emergency, it's understandable to ignore places you can't get a camera to, but later – to continue to ignore them is unconscionable. Most of us would Rather the television people go home, and take their trench coats, egos and cameras with them.

Close as we were, strong as the quake was, we got off easy this time: both chimneys gone, some foundation damage, and a wide assortment of bric-a-brac, pictures, frames and furniture beyond repair. The leaded glass front windows are accordion-pleated now, but not broken. Every plaster wall in the house looks like a dry lake bed, and the concrete walls in the basement sport new two inch cracks.

Interesting note there. Our entrepreneurial son (his term), keeps his wine collection stacked haphazardly against the basement wall. While the wall has gaping cracks, not a case shifted, not a single bottle was broken. He swears however, that half of it won't be drinkable for six months, due to the shaking. Another odd thing: I have eight-foot tall bookcases that line my study wall, all are free-standing and not bolted to the wall. Of all the things I expected to find down, these were my first choice (after my break-front). Not one went over, and not a single book fell out. The only book displaced was my unabridged Webster's. It shifted twelve feet across the room from its perch atop the revolving lawyer's stand.

We are lucky. None of our family was injured, although our #3 son missed the freeway collapse by three seconds and five hundred yards. Our damage was fairly light and repairable. Our earth is still shifting uneasily, and one of these days the San Andreas, the Hayward, the San Gregorio, the Calaveras or any one of hundreds of faults will cut loose with a BIG ONE. But terror firm-a is the serpent in our particular Eden. Besides, MacGregors have always lived on the edge of something dangerous.

GREGG – THE IRISH CONNECTION

Thomas A. Gregg

If your surname is Gregg, it is likely your ancestors came from Scotland by way of Ireland. At the time of the proscription of the name MacGregor in 1603 several families of MacGregors in the Glen Orchy-Glen Strae region took the name of Greg, or Greig in the Scottish spelling. In 1617, King James I of England (James VI of Scotland) visited Scotland for the last time. James was interested in colonizing Ireland and the New World. He was also interested in ridding Scotland of some troublesome MacGregors. He offered land in Glen Arm Baronie in County Antrim in the Province of Ulster in Ireland to a John Greg of Stronmilachan, Glen Strae, provided John would settle it with a group of his kinsmen. Accordingly, John led a party of Gregs to Glen Arm in 1618. He was accompanied by his wife and two year old son, William. In Glen Arm John was a successful farmer until his death in 1645. Most of the Greggs in America are descendants of this group of Scottish emigrants.¹

E. Stuart Gregg, Jr., has found a record of a Thomas Gregg in Northumberland County, Virginia, in 1648, who appears to be the earliest Gregg in this country. There is a record of a Robert Gregg and Edward Wyatt taking up 370 acres of land in Stafford County, Virginia, in 1662.² In 1682 my immigrant ancestor, William Gregg, with his wife and four children, came to America with William Penn's party and settled on 400 acres in Christiana Hundred, New Castle County, Delaware.¹ In 1712, the sons of a John Gregg and grandsons of John's father, David, landed in Boston, Massachusetts. In 1689 both John and David were killed by Irish Catholics near Londonderry. A John Gregg came with a party from Ireland in 1717 and settled in Londonderry, New Hampshire. E. Stuart Gregg, Jr., traces his ancestry from a John Gregg who came to South Carolina from near Belfast, Ireland, prior to 1750, along with two brothers, Joseph and Hugh, and settled in Williamsburg County.² A later Gregg immigrant was John Robert Gregg, the inventor of Gregg shorthand. He came to Chicago from England in 1898. John Robert was born in Ireland, where his father worked for the railway, and moved to Glasgow and then to England.³

To understand some of the reasons for the early departures of Greggs from Ireland one has only to look at this history of England and Ireland during the seventeenth century. In the fall of 1641, after the execution of the King's Lord Lieutenant for Ireland, Thomas Wentworth, Lord Stafford, by means of a Bill of Attainder passed by the English Parliament, the native Irish in Ulster revolted and, in Carrickfergus, killed some Protestant landowners. There is some dispute as to how many were killed. The English called it a "massacre." At about the same time King Charles I and his largely Puritan or Low Church House of Commons were engaged in a struggle over the Royal Prerogative and Parliamentary Power which eventually led to a civil war resulting in the capture and execution of the King. At the war's end, the victorious House of Commons found themselves with a large army, encamped just outside London, whose pay was in arrears and whose members refused to disband. Parliament formed a Council of State to take over the executive duties left by the King's execution. General Oliver Cromwell, who was also a Member of the House of Commons from Cambridge County, served on the Council of State. The Council developed a scheme for sending an army to Ireland to punish the Catholic Irish for the revolt eight years earlier. Cromwell was selected to lead the expeditionary force. The most radical and outspoken of the soldiers were quietly transferred to the expeditionary army and, in 1647, Cromwell landed this army in Ireland. In a short, brutal and merciless campaign he defeated and massacred the Loyalist Irish forces under the Marquess of Ormande. Leaving his son-in-law, Charles Fleetwood, in command to mop up, Cromwell returned to England.⁴ There the Council of State decided to pay off the Army by giving them land in Ireland and to relocate the rebellious Irish to the rocky and barren Province of Connaught, in the Northwest. To accomplish this the Council of State appointed and sent to Ireland, Commissioners for the Ordering and Settling of Affairs in Ireland.⁵ These Commissioners were concerned about the large number of Scottish Presbyterians in the Province of Ulster, most of whom had been loyal to King Charles. They decided to relocate two hundred of the most dangerous of these Scots to the Provinces of Munster and Leinster in the South. The Commissioners for the Settling and Securing of the Province of Ulster issued a proclamation, dated at Carrickfergus, 23 May 1653, directing the two hundred Scottish landowners named therein to move by June, 1654, and agreeing to give them land in the South of equal value to that vacated in the North.⁶ The Scots sent a committee to inspect the land offered. Some of them made the move, but most dragged their feet and remained in Ulster. About this time Oliver Cromwell, having sent the English Parliament packing and taken over the government as a dictator, sent his son, Henry, to Ireland as Lord Lieutenant. Henry was not concerned about the Scots and did not enforce the move.⁷ Among those landowners listed was William Greg, son of John Greg of Glen Arm, who apparently did move to the vicinity of Ardmore, in County Waterford, and it was his son, William, who became a Quaker and moved to Delaware in 1682.

Family tradition passed down by my great-grandfather, Thomas Coulson Gregg, has it that William, the Quaker immigrant, came from Ardmore, County Waterford.

Cromwell ruled as "Protector" until his death in 1658, being succeeded by his son, Richard. Sentiment in England was turning against the Commonwealth. In 1660, with the assistance of the Army and Navy, the house of Stuart was restored to the English throne when Charles II was proclaimed King at Westminster. Although some loyalist Irish had their estates restored, things were fairly quiet in Ireland until the death of Charles II in 1685. After James II succeeded to the throne, because of his Roman Catholicism he was deserted by his troops, the Parliament and the clergy and, in 1688, was replaced as King by his son-in-law, William of Orange. James escaped to France and, in 1689, attempted to regain his throne by landing in Southern Ireland with a small French army. There he was joined by loyal Irish Catholic forces and marched north to Ulster. He was met by William with an English army and defeated in the battle of the Boyne.³

My family is descended from William Gregg, the Quaker immigrant, who arrived in America with William Penn in 1682 and settled 400 acres in Christiana Hundred, New Castle County, Delaware. William was 40 years old when he sailed to America and was accompanied by his wife and four children: John, age 14; Ann, age 12; George, age 8; and Richard, age 6. William cleared some land, built a log cabin and started work on a fieldstone house. He died in 1688, and his eldest son, John, completed the house which he called "Strand Millas." This house is still in use on the estate of Margaret duPont Carpenter, near Centerville, Delaware. The many descendants of William Gregg are recorded in Hazel May Middleton Kendall's book, "Quaker Greggs."

The early history of the Quaker Greggs in America is relatively easy to document since the Society of Friends kept good records, most of which are available in the Quaker Library at Swathmore College or at Haverford College. Records in Ireland are another matter. In 1922 the Irish Republican forces bombarded and set fire to the Four Courts Building in Dublin, destroying many parish and land records kept there.

Mrs. Kendall's account of the Greggs in Ireland is in agreement with my family tradition passed on to my father by his grandfather, Thomas Coulson Gregg, who came to Ohio from Loudon County, Virginia, in 1834. He also passed on an ivory headed walking stick with a silver band which he said was given to John Greg by King James I on his visit to Scotland in 1617. This cane is now in the possession of my cousin, Stanley Gregg, of Palmyra, Ohio. Thomas Coulson Gregg was disowned by the Fairfax Monthly Meeting for marrying a Presbyterian. When told he could return to the Meeting if he would apologize, he told them he was well satisfied with his wife, had done no wrong and would not do so.

Over the past several years I have been attempting to verify and document the early information contained in Mrs. Kendall's book without much success so far. Visits to Ardmore, Glenarm and the Four Courts in Dublin have proved fruitless.

From the Presbyterian Historical Society of Ireland I have learned that most of the early Presbyterian ministers in Ulster held livings in the Church of Ireland (Episcopal). As Scott Pearson says, "it is misleading at this stage of Irish ecclesiastical history (1600-1625) to classify the emigre Scots as Episcopalians or Presbyterians. Many of them were what we might term Prescopalians or Episcoterians . . ." ⁸ I also learned that the early church which served Glenarm was Tickmacreva and it was frequently served by the minister at Cairncastle. Armed with this information a further search of records in the Four Courts may reveal something. At any rate, it provides a good excuse to return to Ireland.

Early records of the Church of Scotland are kept in the New Records Office in Princes Street, Edinburgh, but the early records of the Glen-Orchy church at Dysart, near Dalmally, were destroyed when the church burned in the early eighteenth century. The minister at Glen Orchy, a Mr. Hogg, told me that many MacGregor chiefs are buried there but there is no record of who they are. In the Scottish Record Office I did find a parchment charter for several merklands (whatever they are) in Glen Strae to John MacEuan MacGregor. It was difficult to read, but appeared to be a leasehold from Colin Campbell, Earl of Argyll, dated May 28, 1519.

As yet, I have not been able to determine when the immigrant William Gregg became a Quaker or to find a certificate of removal in the Quaker records here in America. On a visit to the Religious Society of Friends Historical Library in Dublin, I could not find any information. However, when William and his family arrived in America they were accepted as Quakers in good standing.

The Quaker Greggs moved westward from Delaware to Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and across the plains to California. The South Carolina Greggs spread westward to Texas and the Southwest. Josiah Gregg, a descendant of Quaker William, was a Missouri physician who became a trader to Santa Fe and Chihuahua, Mexico, and wrote a book "Commerce on the Prairie" which was first published in 1844 and is still in print. Josiah died of starvation in northern California on a trip from a miners camp to the coast in 1849. ⁹ Two Greggs have been Governors of New Hampshire. William Gregg, a descendant of the Quaker immigrant, became a jeweler and silversmith, first in Columbia and then in Charleston, South Carolina. Before the Civil War he became a strong advocate of industrializing the South and put his money where his mouth was by organizing and building a cotton mill at Graniteville, South Carolina. He also introduced peaches to South Carolina and developed a large peach orchard near Graniteville. The house he built on Calhoun Street in Charleston is still in use as a residence, although it is surrounded by a medical complex. ¹⁰

If you enjoy solving puzzles, you will find the search for information about your ancestors an intriguing and satisfying pastime. I have found that many published books about family history contain errors, and it is best to go back to the source, if you can find it. I have also learned a great deal about the Gregg family. There are still many gaps to be filled in and the search goes on!

SCOTTISH GAMES AND EVENTS

Rio Grande Celtic Festival

On May 13, 1989, Albuquerque, New Mexico, was the site of the second annual Rio Grande Celtic Festival. This event had its beginning in the St. Andrew's Society as a summer "Mini Games" but expanded to incorporate the Irish and Welsh societies into full participation. It has been very beneficial to the solidarity of the Celtic peoples of the area who share in the ancient traditions of the Celtic race.

James A. (Jim) Allensworth, Clan no. 1717LM, is carrying the MacGregor Banner which he made for his own use in the Scottish Games and Events held in his part of the country. The gentleman walking behind Jim is Warren J. (Jerry) VanDyke, Clan no. 2306, of Denver, Colorado. Jerry joined the American Clan Gregor Society during the 1988 Gathering in Denver. He and his wife, Meg, helped Jim man the ACGS tent. They brought with them their West Highland Terriers and you can be sure these four-footed MacGregors were a big attraction in the parade and to visitors to the MacGregor tent.

The 1989 Grandfather Mountain Highland Games and Gathering of the Clans

For this, the 34th Grandfather Mountain Highland Games and Gathering of the Clans on July 8-9, 1989, in Linville, NC, the weather was almost perfect even though Mother Nature had, a few days before the Games, subjected the Linville area to very heavy rains and flooding. While this may have kept a few of the less hardy souls away, attendance and enthusiasm for the program was high.

There was no doubt the athletes, dancers, pipe band members and visitors were grateful for the clement weather. The Marathon runners looked a lot less weary as they made their triumphant last lap around the oval. The Border Collies also seemed to benefit by being more lively and responsive. Their performances were exceptionally good. At times, they and their handlers were the very center of attention. The 1989 MacGregor Quaich for the 16-Pound Sheaf Toss went to Larry Satchwell who set a new "World Record" of 28 feet.

The officers-in-charge of the tents this year were the ever-faithful and hard working Assistant Chieftain Joe Tichy and his wife, Peg, and former Chieftain Bill McGregor and his wife, Lou, our Clan Surgeon. Able and willing assistants were our Ranking Deputy Chieftain George McGregor and his wife, Anne; Eleanor and Leon Bradshaw, Thad Osborne, Brenda Lyerly and Tom and Maggie Gregg. A special thank you to Brenda for all the delicious goodies she brought to help feed our hungry visitors and to the other ladies who contributed their gourmet delights. Jeff and Frieda McGregor, who came up from West Palm Beach, Florida with their young son, also gave us a hand at the table when extra help was needed. We hope they will come again.

About 100 visitors stopped by, some of whom forgot to sign in. Each visitor received a true Scots welcome, than which there is none warmer. Sales of T-Shirts, Cookbooks and Histories were brisk. Many of our visitors expressed their gratitude that such careful attention was given to their inquiries on their family genealogy. It was a good year and we hope to see you all again at Grandfather Mountain for the July 1990 Games.

Pensacola Highland Games

On November 18, 1989, despite unseasonably cold weather, the first annual Pensacola Highland Games came into being. Of twenty-two tents, eleven represented various clans and the balance assorted Scottish organizations.

Captain Paul C. Gregg, Clan no. 1939, and his wife, Millie, marched in the opening Parade of the Tartans. Paul Jr., Clan no 2093, assisted in manning the Clan Gregor tent.

A Pipe Major from one of the six pipe bands present stated that in all the years he had been piping in Florida, this was the first time he had ever seen a MacGregor tent. It should also be noted that this gentleman is a MacGregor and one of two potential members who visited the ACGS tent.

The Pensacola Highland Games originated as a result of the cancellation of the Biloxi (Mississippi) Games and were sponsored by McGuire's Pub in Pensacola, Florida.

To all members of the ACGS who have submitted articles, photographs or art work, and have given me support and advice, thank you! Once again, for all the many wonderful photographs he has contributed to enhance the Yearbook, my very special thanks to our Ranking Deputy Chieftain, George F. McGregor. To my husband, Thomas, for his assistance whenever requested, particularly in the preparation of the genealogical index, my sincere appreciation.
