

introduction

On August 10, 1962, Maryland Poet Laureate Vincent Godfrey Burns visited the College Park home of Gladys Millen Wenk to discuss formation of a society for the promotion of poetry in the state. Millen Wenk had conceived the idea of such a society in 1959, believing the 1960's to be: "the beginning of a new era and offers wide horizons for those interested in the promotion of the correct and sound procedures to encourage writers of all ages."

As a result of this meeting, on September 20, 1962, Burns, Millen Wenk and Calvin Ira Kephart incorporated the Maryland State Poetry Society to: "aid poets and poetry in Maryland by association, publication, recitals orally and over the wires, and in other ways so that the cultural and spiritual life of the people may be stimulated and inspired." The first meeting was held nine days later in the Francis Scott Key Memorial Hall of St. John's College, Annapolis.

The first year's program included a Poet's Theatre, a Poetry Day Program at the State House, and meetings honoring Lizette Woodworth Reese and Society of American Poets' President Jay T. Slimmer, as well as welcoming Leslie Frost, daughter of Poet Robert Frost. The following year, the Society participated in the Annapolis Festival of the Arts as plans were made to publish the anthology The Rainbow.

In 1966, Burns formed The Poet Laureate's "Committee of One Hundred" and left the MSPS which elected Prof. Charles Crane to succeed him as its president. Over the next decade the Workshop Program was established under Prof. Crane with three workshops in Prince Georges County and another in Baltimore City. In Anne Arundel County, a program of poetry readings for patients was established under Elinor Cloukey on the closed-circuit television station of Anne Arundel General Hospital.

Dr. Frederick Morey became president in 1971, the year in which annual contests and banquets were begun with grants from the Maryland Arts Council, and the Society magazine, Oriole, began publication under Editor Helen Patterson. The newsletter became Maryland Musings after Leonard Paul became the society's president in 1973. Paul did not complete his presidential term, which was filled out by Vice-president Mary Gaumond, and Prince Georges County Educator Stacy Tuthill was elected president in 1974. Under her leadership, the Maryland society sponsored the 1976 State Poetry Societies Convention at the American University in the District of Columbia and worked with the Arts Council and the Maryland Writers' Council on other Bicentennial activities.

In 1980 President B. Floyd Flickinger began to gather the Society's records and material on Maryland poets in the Cooke Library at Towson State University. The Collection was subsequently transferred to the University of Baltimore.
