The "Best Friend," the First Locomotive built in the United States for actual service on a Railroad.

The "West Point," the Second Locomotive built in the United States for actual service on a Railroad.

Exciting Race between Mr. Peter Cooper's Locomotive, "Tom Thumb," and a Horse-Car.

The "Best Friend" was built at the West Point Foundry Works, in New York City, for the South Carolina Railroad, chartered in Charleston by John Augustus, October 23rd, and after several experimental trials, in November and December, 1839, made its self-propelled trip on rails, on Saturday, Dec. 4th, 1839, being the anniversary of the commencement of the world. (The engine is now in Charleston Harbor.)

The "West Point" was built at the West Point Foundry Works, in New York City, for the South Carolina Railroad, chartered in Charleston by John Augustus, and after several experimental trials, in February, 1840, made its first successful journey, March 4, 1840. (The engine is now in Charleston Harbor.)

The trial run on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, on the 25th August, 1858. This sketch represents the moment the Engine overtook and passed the Horse-Car, with passengers filled with excitement. (By Mr. Lockwood's directions.)
