

Adopted as the standard work by the Army and Navy Departments

THE STARS AND STRIPES
AND
OTHER AMERICAN FLAGS

BY PELEG D. HARRISON

NEW AND REVISED EDITION, to date

WITH EIGHT ILLUSTRATIONS IN COLOR

417 PAGES. 8VO. CLOTH. $2.00 NET

MR. HARRISON'S authoritative work on the origin and history of our national flags deserves a place in every library and school in the United States. It is the only comprehensive and accurate book of its kind and has already received the endorsement of the Army and Navy departments, Senators, Representatives, Governors, Superintendents of Education, Teachers, Historians, and Civil War Veterans of both North and South. Mr. Harrison's is the only book published containing the history of the Confederate flags. Among the schools in which "The Stars and Stripes" is already in use are the Grammar and High Schools of Manchester, N. H.

The new edition, which is published at a lower price, brings the history of the Stars and Stripes up to date.

In the War Department one copy of the book has been purchased for each military post library in the United States, and the libraries of the U. S. Service Schools, the Coast Artillery Schools and the U. S. Engineers School.

In the Navy Department where "The Stars and Stripes" has been supplied to all ships' libraries, the chief of the bureau of equipment endorsed the book because it contains:

"The most complete history of the American flags of any work that has been published, with a minimum of errors and extraneous matter common in works of this kind. It is recommended that a copy be included in all ships' libraries to take the place of Preble's History, now out of print, and not as complete as the one now in question."

OPINIONS OF THE "STARS AND STRIPES"

The book is unique in its contents, admirable in its arrangement and illustration. In my opinion, it will prove an excellent and almost necessary addition to public libraries and school libraries. — J. Y. Joyner, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Raleigh, N. C.

I have found it a work of absorbing interest, for which you deserve the thanks of the American public. No one can peruse the book without having his patriotism stirred, and feeling a greater love and reverence for the old flag. It ought to be in every library and public school of our land, and I trust that it may have a very large sale both North and South. — Hon. Jacob H. Gallinger, United States Senator for New Hampshire.

I cordially commend the work as one of great value for every library and school. It appeals to the patriotism of all of our citizens, and is written for no section of the country, but for every American. — Hon. Henry E. Burnham, United States Senator for New Hampshire.

I wish a copy could be placed in the hands of every scholar in our public schools. You have accomplished a great work, free from sectionalism, much needed and long neglected. It will be found in every well-equipped library in our country. — Hon. Cyrus A. Sulloway, Representative in Congress of the First District of New Hampshire.

This book is one which should be in every American household, and the members of each should be compelled to read it next after their Bibles. There is not a dull page in the book, and every American, native or naturalized, should read it. — Journal of the Military Service Institution, Governor's Island, New York.

It seems that such a publication would greatly stimulate the feeling of patriotism in our country. . . . You have treated the Confederate flags very fully, and in such a way as will, I am sure, meet with the approval of the Southern people. — Dunbar Rowland, Director of Department of Archives and History of State of Mississippi, Jackson, Miss.

I know of no other work that is so valuable to the ordinary reader or for the person who wishes general information upon this topic. — Charles W. Burrows, President of the Burrows Brothers Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

A most valuable work on a little-known but important subject to all Americans, and a standard of its kind. — Winston Churchill.

A valuable book of reference for teachers. — The American Flag, published by New York State Education Department.

OPINIONS OF THE "STARS AND STRIPES"

A complete and highly-entertaining volume. With infinite pains the author has collated everything available about our flags, and he gives us this information in graphic and pleasing language that cannot fail to command one's interest. — American Primary Teacher, Boston.

As a compendium of the origin and history of the national ensign this volume will be found authentic and complete. — Charleston (S. C.) News.

One of the most delightful books of its kind that has ever come to our table. Patriots will certainly wish a copy. — Journal of Education, Boston.

The book may indeed be considered as a sort of flag encyclopædia, from which nothing significant has been omitted which pertains to the American standard. — New York Tribune.

A book that every American boy and girl should read. — J. C. Kittrell, Superintendent of Public Education for Vance County, N. C.

Educators will do well to put it into school libraries as a reference work for school children wishing to know of "Old Glory," its forerunners and rivals. — Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

The standard text book on the subject treated. — John W. Gordon, Major Confederate States Army and Chairman United Confederate Veterans, Richmond Reunion.

Americans will have their patriotism stirred by reading the origin of the name "Old Glory" as applied to the national emblem, and Southerners especially will turn to the chapters on Confederate flags, including the "Bonnie Blue Flag" and the "Conquered Banner." — Richmond Dispatch.

It gives many excellent illustrations and accounts of the various flags of the Confederacy. — Columbia (S. C.) State.

The result is a work which must become practically a national text-book on all matters relating to the country's flag. — Boston Herald Editorial.

Of real interest to students of our military history. The work deserves a place in every collection of American history. — Army and Navy Journal.

An admirable compendium of the history and literature of our flag, and I think you are entitled to great credit for it. — Hon. John D. Long, Ex-Secretary of the Navy.

OPINIONS OF THE "STARS AND STRIPES"

We imagine that well-nigh everything concerning the American flag will be found in this volume. It is a book that will give pleasure to every patriotic American.—New York Sun.

I congratulate you on the thorough manner in which you have performed your task. I have read the book with much pleasure and interest, and I do not see how it can be easily improved.—Dr. Samuel A. Green, Librarian Massachusetts Historical Society.

Our people owe you a debt of thanks for the very sympathetic treatment of the subject dear to all. Personally I wish to express additional thanks for the very full chapters on the several Confederate flags.—State Historian Thomas M. Owen, Montgomery, Ala.

This book not only gives an account of the Stars and Stripes but also the Stars and Bars, and will fill the place of a long-felt need in regard to the flags of our country.—State Librarian Miles O. Sherrill, Raleigh, N. C.

To Mr. Harrison is due much credit for his exhaustive research in compiling this data. He is especially pleased with the approval that has been evinced by the Southern people for the first history of our flags which has appeared in book form.—The Confederate Veteran, Nashville, Tennessee, the official organ of the United Confederate Veterans.

You have done a lasting service to the whole country, and have brought honor to your city. As a fellow-townsmen I am proud of your achievement. Nothing more creditable has been done by any citizen of Manchester in many a day.—Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D.D., Manchester, N. H.

This is a volume which might properly be placed in all public libraries and all school libraries as well. — Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer.

I was much interested in this valuable flag book, particularly the part containing a history of the flags of our Southland, and I want my grandson at West Point to read it, as there is much information in the book that will be of interest and profit to him as a soldier of the United States. — M. A. Jackson, widow of General Thomas J. ("Stonewall") Jackson, Charlotte, N. C.

His book is receiving hearty approval in this State, a compliment that it deserves from the people throughout the entire South, for in it is found the history of the Confederate flags, as written and told by the Confederates. — Miss Jessica Randolph Smith, North Carolina Commandant, Dames of 1846, Henderson, N. C.

This is the first time the complete story has been written about the national flag and all other American flags, and this makes the book particularly valuable to the Southern people, and to all others who are interested in the Confederacy and its ensigns. — Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

By Josephus Daniels, now
Secretary of the Navy.
