Libguides at Langsdale

Over the years, the librarians at Langsdale have created many guides to include research. Our most popular guides include explanations American Psychological Association and Modern Language Asik researching styles, but we also have guides that can help you get started researching on almost any subject. Libguides offer numerous places for you to send comments and suggestions and sometimes even rank your favorite guide or add a recommended resource to a page. Plus, you can get updates to the guides sent to you via e-mail or an RSS feed. Even if you don’t want to take advantage of those features, the tabs and integrated search and chat boxes make it a lot easier for you to find the information you need.

You can see the new guides at http://ubalt.libguides.com.

Library Reorganization

The library underwent a reorganization over the summer. A new organizational structure was proposed, discussed and planned for implementation to take effect on July 1. The new plan allows for more streamlined processes, consolidation of workspace, and opportunities to adapt to the ever changing needs of our customers with more efficiency and creativity.
Lucy Holman - Library Director

Welcome back to campus! We are all gearing up for a great fall semester with new staff and new energy. As you’ll read in the next few pages we have a number of changes and events in store for you. As you can see on the front page, Langsdale has undergone a staff reorganization, and we hope that the changes we made in several departments will streamline work processes and allow us to provide better service to students, faculty and staff. We are excited to welcome three new staff members, Natalie Burclaff, Pete Ramsey and Adele Marley to Langsdale. We look forward to their fresh ideas and integration into the community.

You may remember that we sponsored several programs last spring to celebrate scholarship from the undergraduate, faculty and alumni perspectives. All were well-received; we are particularly excited to expand the “Inspired Discoveries” symposium, which you’ll read more about in this issue. Faculty and students greatly enjoyed the day and we hope to build upon our success to students, faculty and staff. We are excited to welcome three new staff members, Natalie Burclaff, Pete Ramsey and Adele Marley to Langsdale. We look forward to their fresh ideas and integration into the community.

November 3-4, and our end-of-semester coffee break in December.

We continue to reach out to the university community through our liaisons program; this year we hope to work closely with the University of Baltimore Student Council and have our new student liaison, Dawn Lamb, meet with student organizations to inform students of library services and solicit student input.

We are working closely with the Office of the Provost and the three colleges to reach out to full-time and adjunct professors with services such as our library instruction program.

We strive to provide accessible resources to students on the go; we are working with graduate students in the School of Information Arts & Technology to design a new mobile interface and hope to design a mobile application this year as well.

In this issue you will also read about new building plans for the library. We’ve listened to student concerns about group study space and computing; we hope that our winter renovations will offer new spaces for students. In addition, our laptop loaners program will allow students more flexibility in the library when they need to conduct research or write a paper.

I hope you’ll find this Link informative. Thans to the editorial staff who work tirelessly to put each issue together. As always, I would love to hear from you about what you think. Contact me any time at lholman@ubalt.edu or 410.837.4333.

Library Laptops

If you have a favorite but remote study spot at Langsdale Library, or like to roam around and browse the bookshelves, you may not always have computer access when you’re on the go. To get UB community members back on the grid for fall 2010, Langsdale has acquired 10 laptop computers which will be available for loan at the Circulation Desk on the first floor of the Library. Eight of the laptops are HP mini notebooks, and two are larger Dell Studio 1737s. All are loaded with Microsoft Office and will be WiFI accessible. The 1737s, in particular, boast a terrific perk: they can be connected to the two new 50-inch flat-screen monitors in group study rooms 205 and 206. Students can work on presentations or watch DVDs (in groups, no less) using these compatible devices.

The impetus for acquiring this new abundance of laptops came about in a rather low-tech way, explains Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services: An informal survey posted on a flip chart in the library’s lobby asked UB student patrons if they preferred that more laptops were made available in the library, instead of more standard-issue PCs. Unsurprisingly, students overwhelmingly preferred access to loaner laptops. Hutson also points out that with a couple of computer labs on campus now closed, and Langsdale’s new acquisitions will help bridge the gap for students in need of a hi-tech fix.

Patrons should be sure to have their UB user name and password handy to log into WiFi. Other requirements to use the laptops: equipment must remain in the library at all times. Patrons should have a currently valid UB ID, and must sign a laptop/netbook loan agreement form which explains the loan policy and the replacement costs associated with the equipment in case of theft, loss or damage. For more information, call Langsdale Circulation at 410.837.4260 or e-mail us at langcirc@ubalt.edu.

Inspired Discoveries

The first undergraduate research symposium, "Inspired Discoveries," was held April 30 as part of an effort to recognize and encourage student research. Undergraduate students could apply to present original research and creative works by an individual or team. Langsdale Library, the Helen P. Denit Honors Program and the Office of the Provost organized and sponsored the event. President Robert L. Bogomolny and Associate Provost Jeffrey Sawyer led the opening ceremony, which was followed by 20-minute presentations from the selected student applicants: Kasey Wegmant, Patrick Hurley, Emily Lyles, Stanley Crutchfield and Doug Anderson, Kasha King, Holly Beatty, Ehrard Sewell, and the group of Dawn Wormack, Roslyn Hannah-Booker, Jayson Fuller, Regina Isaksson, Kimberley Stokes and Barbara Kiedrowska.

Patrick Hurley from the Merrick School of Business and Emily Lyles from the then-Yale Gordon College of Liberal Arts each won for best project and received a $500 scholarship. Many of the “inspired” projects are currently being added to an online archive at http://langsdale.ubalt.edu/inspiredDiscoveries.

Students are encouraged to apply for the spring 2011 Inspired Discoveries symposium. For more information, contact Lucy Holman at 410.837.4333 or lholman@ubalt.edu.
Langsdale Shuffle

You don’t have to spend too much time staffing the Circulation or Reference desks before you notice something unusual about the body language of some library visitors upon entering the building: they climb the stairs from street level to the first floor and do a half-spin, looking around apprhesively, trying to decide on a direction. Currently, when entering from the first floor stairs, the Circulation desk is on the right, the Reference desk is on the left and the Security Guard’s station is straight ahead. While Langsdale higher-ups don’t necessarily subscribe to the tenets of feng shui, they acknowledge that a new arrangement of space on the first floor—as well as shifting some things around on the second floor, and in the basement—will create a more welcoming atmosphere for patrons.

Langsdale intends to have the spruced-up space ready for its users by the start of spring 2011. The first order of business is to reorganize the first floor in such a way that navigating it will be a more intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, explains, “we have to figure out for them intuitive experience for visitors.

To wit: the Circulation Desk and Reference Desks will be placed directly in front of patrons entering the building, against the north wall of the first floor. Head of Reference Michael Shochet is working on a space configuration for the first floor that will give students more room for studying and lounging, with additional soft seating and possibly movable tables and chairs that students can arrange as they wish. DVDs and the Leisure Reading sections will still be nearby, as will the personal computers. In fact, eight new computers will be added, says Shochet.

Hutson envisions more private study rooms (one, or possibly two more) constructed on the second floor after the less-frequently used Government Documents section is moved to the basement. There will also be more space cleared on Floor 2 for tables and student work space, in order to encourage collaborative study.

No need to worry about dodging “Pardon Our Dust” signs or being inconvenienced by limited services during the fall semester—all the reshuffling and improvements will take place late in December and in early January, after fall exams are over and patrons are less likely to be visiting Langsdale. Look forward to a spiffy new space in which to relax, read and study in the imminent future!

Langsdale Blog

A great way to keep-up with current happenings at Lansdale Library is the Langsdale blog: http://langsdalelibrary.blogspot.com/ Here you’ll find updated information on library events, useful information that will give you an edge on your class assignments and insights on the latest information for the digital age.

American Archives Celebration

Langsdale joins the College of Public Affairs to celebrate American Archives Month. As another election approaches, join us for a discussion on November 15, focusing on the governing styles of Maryland Governors of the last century, with an exhibit of related archival items held in the University’s Special Collections in Langsdale Library. Maryland elections in the latter half of the 20th century will be discussed by a panel drawn from the faculty of the college, while archival records from the 2000 presidential race will be on display. Election cycles from 1958 to 1994, when municipal elections followed closely behind gubernatorial contests, will be discussed.

Here is a taste of a recent state history to whet your appetite for this important month:

In 1958, Democrat J. Millard Tawes was easily elected to succeed two-term Republican Gov. Theodore McKeldin. The departing governor returned immediately to Baltimore to challenge Mayor Thomas D’Alesandro, Jr. in the spring 1959 municipal election (see photo). Both were surprised by City States’ Attorney J. Harold Grady, who defeated D’Alesandro. (The papers of Thomas D’Alesandro, Jr. are held by in our Special Collections.)

The 1966 contest to succeed Governor Tawes became a three-way race when segregationist George Mahoney won the Democratic primary. City Comptroller Hyman Pressman, who had been elected on a ticket with McKeldin four years earlier, entered the race as an Independent. The Republican candidate, Baltimore County Executive Spiro Agnew, J.D. ’47, won a plurality of the vote. UB Special Collections includes the political papers of Judge Walter E. Black and the recently received papers of David H. Hugel, J.D. ’73, both active in the Baltimore Republican Party.

Political turmoil followed the 1968 Baltimore Riots, with Gov. Agnew elected vice president of the United States and “Young Tommy” D’Alesandro leaving City Hall after a single term as mayor. William Donald Schaefer, J.D. ’51, succeeded D’Alesandro in 1971 and was reelected three times as mayor. He was then elected governor by the largest majority in Maryland history in 1986. At the end of his second term as governor, Schaefer entrusted to UB a collection of political cartoons from his own political career—140 original pen and ink drawings given to him by various political cartoonists.

Schaefer’s 1987 departure for the Statehouse left the mayoralty to Clarence “Du” Burns, the city’s first black mayor. Burns was defeated in the Democratic primary by City States Attorney Kurt Schmoke, who won the general election to become the first elected black mayor in Baltimore history. Photographs from Schmoke’s three terms were given to UB Special Collections by Robert Breck Chapman, the mayor’s official photographer.

In 1994, Lt. Gov. Melvin Steinberg, J.D., ’55, and Rep. Helen Delich Bentley seemed likely to face off in the race to succeed Gov. Schaefer. But Bentley was defeated in the Republican primary by Del. Ellen Richmond Sauerbrey. UB’s Special Collections include the papers of Bentley from her time as a maritime reporter and editor with the (Baltimore) Sun and WMAR-TV, through five terms in Congress and the race for governor.
Adele Marley

Birthdate: March 31
Hometown: Olney, Md., but now I live in Catonsville
First job: wrapping gifts at Woodward & Lothrop
Hobbies: reading, thrifting, maintaining my Etsy store, antiquing, pop culture consumption, making kitschy and kawaii jewelry
Favorite books: Hollywood Babylon, A Confederacy of Dunces, true crime and other nonfiction Favorite TV shows: Mad Men, Columbo, The Wire, The Simpsons... Tough to narrow this one down.
Favorite website: Etsy, Design Sponge, IMDB, and various celeb gossip sites
Favorite foods: pho, cheeseburgers, cupcakes, Indian
What I like best about Baltimore: The majority of my friends live here, and it’s got a small-town, unpretentious vibe.
What I like best about UB: Everyone I’ve met here is congenial and knows their stuff.

Library Liaisons

College of Public Affairs
Public and International Affairs
Catherine Johnson 410.837.4276 cajohnson@ubalt.edu
Health and Human Services
Mike Kiel 410.837.4236 skiel@ubalt.edu
Criminal Justice
Susan Wheeler 410.837.4299 swheeler@ubalt.edu

Merrick School of Business
Natalie Burclaff 410.837.5072 nburclaff@ubalt.edu
Ted Kruse 410.837.4204 tkruse@ubalt.edu
T. Peter Ramsey 410.837.4275 pramsey@ubalt.edu

Yale Gordon College of Arts & Sciences
Communications Design
Jeffrey Hutson 410.837.4298 jhutson@ubalt.edu
Information Arts & Technology
Michael Shochet 410.837.4277 mshochet@ubalt.edu
Applied Behavioral Science
Lucy Holman 410.837.4333 lholman@ubalt.edu
Legal, Ethical and Historical Studies
Tom Hollowak 410.837.4268 thollowak@ubalt.edu
Liberal Studies
Mike Kiel 410.837.4236 skiel@ubalt.edu

Birthdate: July 3
Hometown: Milwaukee
First job: working at my aunt and uncle’s drive-in diner
Hobbies: baseball games, decorating my apartment, planning and going on vacations
Favorite books: A Tree Grows in Brooklyn
Favorite movies: When Harry Met Sally, The Hangover, El secreto de Sus Ojos
Favorite TV shows: The Closer and anything on HGTV
Favorite website: local newspaper websites, partly for the news and partly for the comments on the news
Favorite foods: mint chocolate chip ice cream, cheddar cheese jalapenos poppers
What I like best about Baltimore: I haven’t explored all of Baltimore yet, but I like the variety of restaurants in the different neighborhoods.
What I like best about UB: The people I work with! I also like that it’s a small university in a large city.

Pete Ramsey

Birthdate: Nov. 25
Hometown: born in California, also lived in Colorado, Kentucky, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, North Carolina and 11 years in Bolivia
First job: soda bottling factory
Hobbies: reading, cooking, team sports, board games
Favorite books: science fiction that makes me think; English literature
Favorite movies: Star Wars: Parts 4-6, Lawrence of Arabia, Into the Woods
Favorite TV shows: The Colbert Report, UK and UEFA soccer games
Favorite website: delicious.com, Google maps, epicurious.com and pandora.com
Favorite foods: Homemade slow food using fresh herbs and vegetables, meat, chocolate
What I like best about Baltimore: So far, it seems like a town with manageable size, affordability, and people who are generally open and kind.
What I like best about UB: awesome co-workers
NEW STAFF

Adele Marley

Birthdate: March 31
Hometown: Olney, MD, but now I live in Catonsville
First job: wrapping gifts at Woodward & Lothrop
Hobbies: reading, thrifting, maintaining my Etsy store, antiquing, pop culture consumption, making kitschy and kawaii jewelry
Favorite books: Hollywood Babylon, A Confederacy of Dunces, true crime and other nonfiction
Favorite TV shows: Mad Men, Columbo, The Wire, The Simpsons... Tough to narrow this one down.
Favorite website: Etsy, Design Sponge, IMDB, and various celeb gossip sites
Favorite foods: pho, cheesesburgers, cupcakes, Indian
What I like best about Baltimore: The majority of my friends live here, and it's got a small-town, unpretentious vibe.
What I like best about UB: Everyone I've met here is congenial and knows their stuff.

Pete Ramsay

Birthdate: Nov. 25
Hometown: born in California, also lived in Colorado, Kentucky, Virginia, Pennsylvania,
New Jersey, North Carolina and 11 years in Bolivia
First job: soda bottling factory
Hobbies: reading, cooking, team sports, board games
Favorite books: science fiction that makes me think; English literature
Favorite movies: Star Wars Parts 4-6, Lawrence of Arabia, Into the Woods
Favorite TV shows: The Colbert Report, UK and UEFA soccer games
Favorite website: delicious.com, Google maps, epicurious.com and pandora.com
Favorite foods: Homemade slow food using fresh herbs and vegetables, meat, chocolate
What I like best about Baltimore: So far, it seems like a town with manageable size, affordability, and people who are generally open and kind.
What I like best about UB: awesome co-workers
Langsdale Shuffle

You don’t have to spend too much time staffing the Circulation or Reference desks before you notice something unusual about the body language of some library visitors upon entering the building: they climb the stairs from street level to the first floor and do a half-spin, looking around apprehensively, trying to decide on a direction. Currently, when entering from the first floor stairs, the Circulation desk is on the right, the Reference desk is on the left and the Security Guard’s station is straight ahead. While Langsdale higher-ups don’t necessarily subscribe to the tenets of feng shui, they acknowledge that a new arrangement of space on the first floor—as well as shifting some things around on the second floor, and in the basement—will create a more welcoming atmosphere for patrons.

Langsdale intends to have the spruced-up space ready for its users by the start of spring 2011. The first order of business is to reorganize the first floor in such a way that navigating it will be a more intuitive experience for visitors. As Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services, puts it: “People are naturally hesitant to ask for directions. They would rather figure it out for themselves.”

To wit: The Circulation Desk and Reference Desks will be placed directly in front of patrons entering the building, against the north wall of the first floor. Head of Reference Michael Shochet is working on a space configuration for the first floor that will give students more room for studying and lounging, with additional soft seating and possibly movable tables and chairs that students can arrange as they wish. DVDs and the Leisure Reading sections will still be nearby, as will the personal computers. In fact, eight new computers will be added, says Shochet. Hutson envisions more private study rooms (one, or possibly two more) constructed on the second floor after the less-frequently used Government Documents section is moved to the basement. There will also be more space cleared on Floor 2 for tables and student work space, in order to encourage collaborative study.

No need to worry about dodging “Pardon Our Dust” signs or being inconvenienced by limited services during the fall semester—all the reshuffling and improvements will take place late in December and in early January, after fall exams are over and patrons are less likely to be visiting Langsdale. Look forward to a spiffy new space in which to relax, read and study in the imminent future!

Langsdale Blog

A great way to keep-up with current happenings at Lansdale Library is the Langsdale blog: http://langsdalelibrary.blogspot.com/ Here you’ll find updated information on library events, useful information that will give you an edge on your class assignments and insights on the latest information for the digital age.

American Archives Celebration

Langsdale joins the College of Public Affairs to celebrate American Archives Month. As another election approaches, join us for a discussion on November 8, focusing on the governing styles of Maryland Governors of the last century, with an exhibit of related archival items held in the University’s Special Collections in Langsdale Library. Maryland elections in the latter half of the 20th century will be discussed by a panel drawn from the faculty of the college, while archival records from the will be on display. Election cycles from 1958 to 1994, when municipal elections followed closely behind gubernatorial contests, will be discussed.

Here is a taste of a recent state history to whet your appetite for this important month:

In 1958, Democrat J. Millard Tawes was easily elected to succeed two-term Republican Gov. Theodore McKeldin. The departing governor returned immediately to Baltimore to challenge Mayor Thomas D’Alesandro, Jr. in the spring 1959 municipal election (see photo). Both were surprised by City States’ Attorney J. Harold Grady, who defeated D’Alesandro. (The papers of Thomas D’Alesandro, Jr. are held by in our Special Collections.)

The 1966 contest to succeed Governor Tawes became a three-way race when segregationist George Mahoney won the Democratic primary. City Comptroller Hyman Pressman, who had been elected on a ticket with McKeldin four years earlier, entered the race as an Independent. The Republican candidate, Baltimore County Executive Spiro Agnew, J.D. ’47, won a plurality of the vote. UB Special Collections includes the political papers of Judge Walter E. Black and the recently received papers of David H. Hugo, J.D. ’73, both active in the Baltimore Republican Party.

Political turmoil followed the 1968 Baltimore Riots, with Gov. Agnew elected vice president of the United States and “Young Tommy” D’Alesandro leaving City Hall after a single term as mayor. William Donald Schaefer, J.D. ’51, succeeded D’Alesandro in 1971 and was reelected three times as mayor. He was then elected governor by the largest majority in Maryland history in 1986. At the end of his second term as gov—rein, Schaefer entrusted to UB a collection of political cartoons from his own political career—140 original pen and ink drawings given to him by various political cartoonists.

Schaefer’s 1987 departure for the Statehouse left the mayoralty to Clarence “Du” Burns, the city’s first black mayor. Burns was defeated in the Democratic primary by City States Attorney Kurt Schmoke, who won the general election to become the first elected black mayor in Baltimore history. Photographs from Schmoke’s three terms were given to UB Special Collections by Robert Breck Chapman, the mayor’s official photographer.

In 1994, Lt. Gov. Melvin Steinberg, J.D., ’55, and Rep. Helen Delich Bentley seemed likely to face off in the race to succeed Gov. Schaefer. But Bentley was defeated in the Republican primary by Del. Ellen Richmond Sauerbrey. UB’s Special Collections include the papers of Bentley from her time as a maritime reporter and editor with the (Baltimore) Sun and WMAR-TV, through five terms in Congress and the race for governor.
Welcome back to campus! We are all gearing up for a great fall semester with new staff and new energy. As you'll read in the next few pages we have a number of changes and events in store for you. As you can see on the front page, Langsdale has undergone a staff reorganization, and we hope that the changes we made in several departments will streamline work processes and enable us to provide better service to students, faculty and staff. We are excited to welcome three new staff members, Natalie Burclaff, Pete Ramsey and Adele Marley to Langsdale. We look forward to their fresh ideas and integration into the community.

You may remember that we sponsored several programs last spring to celebrate scholarship from the undergraduate, faculty and alumni perspectives. All were well-received; we are particularly excited to expand the "Inspired Discoveries" symposium, which you’ll read more about in this issue. Faculty and students greatly enjoyed the day and we hope to build upon our success to develop a more extensive program in April. We are also looking forward to several events this fall, including the welcome back "Cupcake Cotillion" on September 8; an October celebration of American Archives month with an exhibit on historical state elections and an evening program, co-sponsored by Langsdale and the College of Public Affairs, our annual fall book sale on November 3-4, and our end-of-semester coffee break in December.

We continue to reach out to the university community through our liaisons program; this year we hope to work closely with the University of Baltimore Student Council and have our new student liaison, Dawn Lamb, meet with student organizations to inform students of library services and solicit student input. We are working closely with the Office of the Provost and the three colleges to reach out to full-time and adjuncts professors with services such as our library instruction program.

We strive to provide accessible resources to students on the go; we are working with graduate students in the School of Information Arts & Technology to design a new mobile interface and hope to design a mobile library application this year as well.

In this issue you will also read about new building plans for the library. We’ve listened to student concerns about group study space and computing; we hope that our winter renovations will offer new spaces for students. In addition, our laptop loaner program will allow students more flexibility in the library when they need to conduct research or write a paper.

I hope you’ll find this Link informative. Thans to the editorial staff who work tirelessly to put each issue together. As always, I would love to hear from you about what you think. Contact me any time at lholman@ubalt.edu or 410.837.4333.

Lucy Holman - Library Director

Library Laptops

If you have a favorite but remote study spot at Langsdale Library, or like to roam around and browse the bookshelves, you may not always have computer access when you’re on the go. To get UB community members back on the grid for fall 2010, Langsdale has acquired 10 laptop computers which will be available for loan at the Circulation Desk on the first floor of the library. Eight of the laptops are HP mini notebooks, and two are larger Dell Studio 1737s. All are loaded with Microsoft Office and will be WiFi accessible. The 1737s, in particular, boast a terrific perk: they can be connected to the two new 50-inch flat-screen monitors in group study rooms 205 and 206. Students can work on presentations or watch DVDs (in groups, no less!) using these compatible devices.

The impetus for acquiring this new abundance of laptops came about in a rather low-tech way, explains Jeffrey Hutson, Langsdale’s associate director for public services: An informal survey posted on a flip chart in the library’s lobby asked UB student patrons if they preferred that more laptops were made available in the library, instead of more standard-issue PCs. Unsurprisingly, students overwhelmingly preferred access to loaner laptops. Hutson also points out that with a couple of computer labs on campus now closed, and Langsdale’s new acquisitions will help bridge the gap for students in need of a hi-tech fix.

Patrons should be sure to have their UB user name and password handy to log into WiFi. Other requirements to use the laptops: equipment must remain in the library at all times. Patrons should have a currently valid UB ID, and must sign a laptop/netbook loan agreement form which explains the loan policy and the replacement costs associated with the equipment in case of theft, loss or damage. For more information, call Langsdale Circulation at 410.837.4260 or e-mail us at langcirc@ubalt.edu.

Inspired Discoveries

The first undergraduate research symposium, “Inspired Discoveries,” was held April 30 as part of an effort to recognize and encourage student research. Undergraduate students could apply to present original research and creative works by an individual or team. Langsdale Library, the Helen P. Denit Honors Program and the Office of the Provost organized and sponsored the event. President Robert L. Bogomolny and Associate Provost Jeffrey Sawyer led the opening ceremony, which was followed by 20-minute presentations from the selected student applicants: Kasey Weygant, Patrick Hurley, Emily Lyles, Stanley Crutchfield and Doug Anderson, Keshia King, Holly Beatty, Ehrand Sewell, and the group of Dawn Wormack, Roslyn Hannibal-Booker, Jayson Fuller, Regina Isaksson, Kimberley Stokes and Barbara Kiedrowska.

Patrick Hurley from the Merrick School of Business and Emily Lyles from the then-Yale Gordon College of Liberal Arts each won for best project and received a $500 scholarship. Many of the “Inspired” projects are currently being added to an online archive at http://langsdale.ubalt.edu/inspiredDiscoveries.

Students are encouraged to apply for the spring 2011 Inspired Discoveries symposium. For more information, contact Lucy Holman at 410.837.4333 or lholman@ubalt.edu.
Libguides at Langsdale

Over the years, the librarians at Langsdale have created many guides to include research. Our most popular guides include explanations American Psychological Association and Modern Language Asks researching styles, but we also have guides that can help you get started researching on almost any subject. Libguides offer numerous places for you to send comments and suggestions and sometimes even rank your favorite guide or add a recommended resource to a page. Plus, you can get updates to the guides sent to you via e-mail or an RSSfeed. Even if you don’t want to take advantage of those features, the tabs and integrated search and chat boxes make it a lot easier for you to find the information you need.

You can see the new guides at http://ubalt.libguides.com.

Library Reorganization

The library underwent a reorganization over the summer. A new organizational structure was proposed, discussed and planned for implementation to take effect on July 1. The new plan allows for more streamlined processes, consolidation of workspace, and opportunities to adapt to the ever changing needs of our customers with more efficiency and creativity.