Memorandum

From: HDB
To: Prime Minister Milan Panic
Date: August 10, 1992.

Several important developments took place today, and I want to bring them to your attention:

1. The Senate will vote tomorrow on a very serious resolution concerning the situation in Bosnia and Hercegovina.
2. Understand you are invited to Brussels.
3. People who want to work with you and help are concerned that you are gaining the perception that you talk too much and do not listen to others enough; that this deters from the efforts you are trying to accomplish.
4. You need to call Senator Cranston who is quoting Margaret Thatcher as being on target. Cranston just said he supports the resolution.

Memorandum -- August 12, 1992

Samoza
Panić

To: The Hon. Milan Panic
From: HDB

This is a two part memo -- the first part, offering you an excellent opportunity to bring about a scoop while you are with Donaldson. The second is about him.

1. After receiving several phone calls and reading Tanjug, we have learned that the so-called "POW" who allegedly has been mistreated -- in a Serbian-controlled detention center -- the one whose photograph is on the cover of Time and Newsweek this week and who was in the forefront of all of the television shots of "the camps," is a Serb. His sister, Miroslava Prilisauer, lives in Vienna. I talked with her this evening. She said that she recognized him when she saw the photos about 10 PM Aug 6 and they were later confirmed by her mother and sister. She says that he had lung and kidney problems two years ago, and a lung operation 10 years ago.

She also recognized another brother, Zoran Konjević, sitting down with the group eating. I am not certain that it was in the same camp. He also is Serb.

Slobodan Konjević is the front cover hero.

The big questions to be answered today are:

1. If they are Serb as their sister says, why are Serbs being held in a Serb-controlled camp?
2. Was this truly a Serb-controlled camp?
3. Why don't you ask to get them out so we can have them interrogated directly?

Slobodan is supposed to be the one with the beard and the lungs showing who appeared in the front of all the shots.

If you could get that story out immediately, if it is true, it would help considerably in the UN Council vote.

The sister's phone number in Vienna is 43-1-424 8274.

She said she did not know where their third brother, Dushko, is, nor where their aunts are. She had moved from Sarajevo 18 years ago when she got married, but has seen her family frequently until lately. She is very emotional.

Samozamčan

2. The resolutions passed by both the House and the Senate today are not binding, but are not helpful. The Senate had 22 against it. The House was by a voice vote because we were concerned about an overwhelming defeat.

They, of course, will help spin the UN along -- but proof of that phony camp could help stop it (1)

3. Please read this enclosed article carefully -- as it also explains some of the above. appeared in the New Statesman today.

4. This paragraph is for your eyes alone. Since Sam Donaldson is accompanying you to do a story for Prime Time, I urge you to be careful što ti rečeš njemu. Do not shoot from the hip about "getting rid of this guy" or that or whatever. You only say you are striving diligently to try to turn things around, to get rid of all Communists as fast as possible, end the war, have peace and push the economy forward.

The hip-shooting statements have caused eyebrows to be raised over your competency in the political executive world -- that position. I have to tell you this because I am your friend and I want you to succeed. Rada was in and we talked about this and she has heard some of it from other sources. Čuvaj se, eli onaj novinar estvrag ko naj volje da putsa nekoga, or da metne nekoga na nožu.....molim te da čuvaš se. Svaki reč trebaš mislit prije nego rečeš pred njega.

Will be anxious to heard about your success on the trip.. If the road stays open, it will be a great success. There was not much hope here believing that it would. Now is the time to fool them.

Best regards

I can do you a dead baby on a cross or I've got some nice gouged eyes!

ATROCITIES

Spin doctors of war

In a civil war, as in any marketing campaign, it's important to get third-party endorsement for your story. Karl Waldron reports on the PR of conflict

It would have been perhaps the worst atrocity so far in a war where horror follows on horror: Serbian irregular snipers paid the equivalent of £200 for every child-kill they achieve. The story was related by Steve Watt, a volunteer aid worker.

"They target the children," he said, "because of the money and because they are easier to kill. With their small size, the bullets make a bigger mess."

Mr Watt's words were transmitted—along with his claimed statistic for 11,000 child injuries from gunshot wounds and some 400 child-deaths—on Sunday, the BBC's morning radio news service, The World This Weekend and, perhaps most importantly, on News Hour, the World Service flagship news programme the following day. They were thus read into the record for a potential English language audience of 300 million listeners worldwide.

And the story is almost certainly not true. No one imputes any ulterior motive in Mr

Watt's relating what he had been told by Croats and Bosnians in his brave journey in a truck convoy on the road to Sarajevo, but one does have to question the BBC's editorial judgment in the manner of its transmission.

Like many others of its genre, this story had its origins in Bosnia-Herzegovina, but owes more than a little in its passage to Croat/Bosnian, and now international, folklore to the outpourings of a PR company's fax machine in Washington DC.

While origins of atrocity stories are frequently difficult to discern in war, the history of this one, unusually, can be traced. It first gained its credence in the Croatian media and, like many others from both sides of the conflict, it has little or no first-hand substantiation.

It made an appearance in an article written by Iritse Zortic, a Bosnian Muslim journalist working for a Croatian newspaper, the contents of which were subsequently repeated in other Croatian newspapers and formed part of a news broadcast transmitted by Radio Croatia International.

The service, which peppers its broadcast with items of blatant propaganda passing as "news", is treated with disdain by the western media. But like all international broadcasts it is monitored by the BBC at Caversham, whose operators hear its other favoured subjects—Serbian salt mines operated with Croat and Bosnian slave labour and Kurdish militia fighting, for huge sums of money, for the Serbian cause.

The Caversham monitors record important information from the airwaves in the Summary of World Broadcasts. One said recently: "Frankly, much of what we get from all sides in this conflict is unusable, useless. Unless it is a speech or something like that, it usually finds its way to the bin." Which is what happened to Zortic's story.

Zortic stands by his story, but admitted last week that he was given it by the Croatian Information Ministry, in a private interview, and that he made no further checks. "Who could I ask?" he says. "You can't expect us to ring them [the Serbs] and believe them when they say it isn't true." But the tale, which is so widely accepted as fact in Croatia as to be described as an "old chestnut" by a senior western journalist covering the Yugoslav conflict, owes much to an earlier communication from the fax machine in the offices of Ruder and Finn in Washington.

Last week, Rhoda Paget from the company admitted to assisting in disseminating the "Cash for a Corpse" story. "We were told it by a minister in the Croatian government. We merely informed them of its importance and have never checked its honesty. Neither do we have the resources to do so. Frankly, it's just not our job. It's the journalist's job to check them out... but it came to notice by a surprising route." Ruder and Finn's "job" is to handle the PR account for the governments of Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina at a cost of US$18,000 (£9,700) a month, while British lobbying company, Ian Greer Associates, act in a similar regard "on behalf of Serbian interests", their undisclosed fee paid by a "syndicate of Serbian businessmen".

According to John MacArthur, publisher of Harpers magazine, and author of a book, Second Front, on the subject of public relations and propaganda in the Gulf war, it is the American company that is currently doing the better. "The relative success of these companies in getting horror stories into print is critical to the setting of the international political agenda," he says. "They affect votes in both the Security Council and the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe by altering the mind set of an electorate who would never dream of reading a UN resolution. They establish the conditions which make it possible to be involved in a war."

MacArthur points to the success of PR company Hill and Knowlton in promoting the "Dead Kuwaiti Babies" story, in which Iraqi troops were alleged to have taken Kuwaiti babies out of their incubators and left them to die on the hospital floor. The story relied on the testimony of an eye witness who subsequently gave televised testimony to the Congressional Human Rights Caucus. The "eye-witness" was subsequently revealed to be the daughter of the Kuwaiti ambassador to Washington who had been "told" about the killings by witnesses who have never since been produced.

"If this had been known at the time," John Edward Potter, senior Republican on the caucus said, "she would have not been allowed to testify". But the story of the story was not published until January this year, nine months after the end of Desert Storm. "Nayirah's testimony was critical for establishing the conditions where the American public would accept the deaths—any death—of their own," says MacArthur. "It is ironic and immoral that such changes should have brought about misinformation, perhaps even a downright fake."

According to Tom O'Sullivan, a journalist at PR Week, both Steve Watt's and Nayirah's testimony provide what is called in PR-speak, "a classic third-party endorsement", although Nayirah's was not revealed as such at the time. A story is told, someone else

Body counts

Reporting on the claims and counter-claims of the numerous atrocities in Bosnia and Serbia has become a journalistic minefield. Both sides have long since embraced propaganda, accusing the other of orgies of violence that hark back to the atrocities committed in Yugoslavia during the second world war.

I saw similarly exaggerated claims during the Romanian revolution of 1989, when disembowelled bodies of pregnant women were paraded in front of the press in Timisoara. In fact, these women had died of natural causes and had been cut open for autopsies—not butchered by Ceausescu's Securitate.

For the first time last week, one side in the Yugoslav conflict retracted an atrocity claim. A thousand Bosnian Serbs were alleged to have been massacred in Odzak in northern Bosnia, which had been captured by the Croats for three months. The Belgrade news agency, Tanjug, withdrew the claim when commanders from the Bosnian Serb army said there was no evidence of any graves. It then emerged that the reporter had picked up the claim from Glas, a paper published in a Serb stronghold. This rare retraction could signal a new trend, sparked off by the realisation that false reports only escalate the scale of the sectarian-style atrocities on either side.

The Croats have produced a 500-page book with pictures and eyewitness statements of Serbian atrocities. I saw pictures of burnt bodies with their hands tied and their genitals cut off and forced down their throats. When I was in Split last month, re-tellects it and in the retelling it often gets embroidered. Watt says he was told the child-killing story on the road to Sarajevo and has no first-hand knowledge. That means the real, true story is that someone, preferably English or an English speaker and a non-combatant, believes in its authenticity. "But the listener doesn't take it in as hearsay—instead they hear it as recorded fact," says Sullivan. "You could argue, that is what the PR industry is all about."

According to an executive at Hill and Knowlton who, although not acting for any Balkan interests, refused to be named, the fact that Croatia is not subjected to any embargo, even for weaponry, while Serbia faces sanctions, may itself be due to better PR. A recent investigation of reported atrocities showed that the number of substantiated incidents was similar: four perpetrated by Serbs, two by Croats, one by Muslims, and two by Muslims and Croats together.

John Kennedy, a Conservative parliamentary candidate at the last election, now a PR ports came through of a massacre of 15 Croatian soldiers in western Bosnia. Their faces had been shot to pieces, they had been castrated, and two fingers from each hand had been cut off, leaving the three-fingered Serbian salute.

Serbsians tell similar stories of mass torture. The strongly partisan paper, Politika, has accused the Croats' crack Ustashe force of "ethnic cleansing" in eastern Bosnia, and of razing Serb villages with modern German weaponry.

Speaking to some Chetniks (crack Bosnian Serb troops) in a Serb stronghold near Sarajevo, prejudice and propaganda was very apparent. The Chetniks, many of them teenagers, told me that during their ethnic cleansing operations, they had been attacked by drug-crazed Muslim Bosnians, and had rescued Serb children who had been raped by Muslims. They said that they had proof that Libyans, African and Iranian mercenaries were fighting for the Bosnians. In the same breath, they said that all Muslims were "dirty Arabs who wipe their bottoms with their hands".

The atrocities inflicted on Bosnian Muslims have been documented in a report called Save the Humanity, which was published last month by Bosnian peace and non-governmental organisations based in Sarajevo. It draws on 20 statements made by eye-witnesses, who said they would be willing to stand up in an international court and repeat their statements.

These factual accounts seem credible, but some of the stories I heard in Sarajevo could easily have been exaggerations or pure myth. As the war in Bosnia continues new atrocity stories come to light every day, increasing the stakes, and the bitterness on all sides. Such horror stories, whether true or false—and some certainly are true—will divide communities in Bosnia and the other Yugoslav republics for years to come.

Kevin Weaver

consultant with Ian Greer Associates who has worked on the Serbian account, says that the Serbian government in its support for Serbian irregulars is "faced with losing battles on the second (propaganda) front precisely because they have been winning the war. The public relations defeats do not bother the fighters, of course, but they have an indirect effect on their ability to prosecute their war."

Mr Kennedy, usually labelled by BBC radio—and without further qualification—as "an expert on Serbian affairs", feels Greer's way is more subtle than that favoured by the American companies. "We use the press," he said "but it is behind the scenes lobbying, and the use of governmental opinion to sway international governmental opinion where we are the most effective. The Serbs will now have more opportunity for pressing their cause. Milan Panic, prime minister of the rump Yugoslavia, numbers Lawrence Eagleburger, US assistant secretary of state among his closest friends.

1. CNN had a 15 minute segment on Yugoslavia tonight. Compared to its reporting in the past week of the Yugoslav civil war, the report was almost more balanced than any have ever been. Among other things, the footage included pictures of barbed wire having been taken down in one camp - a positive sign.

I have done more investigating on Slobodan Konjevic today. His sister says that he is 37 years old, and I also received a photocopy (via fax) of his picture which was taken last year. He resembles the image of the skinny figure portrayed on the CNN footage of a detention camp in Bosnia.

Slobodan Konjevic is the skinny man pictured on page 16 (enclosed) of the latest "Newsweek" and on the front page of the "N.Y. Times" of August 7. However, I have not seen him in the fresh footage of detention camps shown on CNN today.

It would be a tremendous achievement for you if you could track down this man, and his brother Zoran (who was also identified by their sister as being a prisoner in the camp), and re-unite them with her in Vienna. I am certain that you would get much positive press coverage for that, as well as raise some questions about the validity of the report which stated that the camp shown last week was Serb-run.

2. While we are on the subject of publicity, a woman is interested in writing a book about you. She is willing to write objectively, and at length, about what has happened to the Serbs in the past and what is happening to Yugoslavia these days, by tying this background in with your life. Would you be agreeable?

3. The all-for-all exchange of prisoners has raised some questions for fear that many Serbian POWs have been killed by their captors - and therefore the exchange would be one sided.

4. Also some questions as to Yugoslavia's recognition of the state of Bosnia and Hercegovina within its present borders. What happens to Western Hercegovina which Croatia controls? Various newspapers say there should be a return to the negotiations of cantonization of Bosnia-Hercegovina, as the three nationalities started to do. Maybe you could call for this to happen.

RE: URGENT REQUEST FOR HOLOCAUST MUSEUM

The Serbian Community stands a good chance of being forever excluded from the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, but there is still a way of preventing this from happening.

This Washington Museum -- only one of three like it in the world (the others are Yad Vashem in Tel Aviv, and in Los Angeles) -- is completing its permanent displays within the next 30 days. Despite numerous requests to the Yugoslav Government for help, to date there is little or nothing among these displays pertaining to Yugoslavia.

We have 30 days to supply the Museum with these materials, and preserve this vital history for posterity. Otherwise, nothing that we may ever contribute in the future will be made part of the permanent displays. TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE. Dr. Radu Ioanid, Director of the Photo Research Department, asserts that the permanent displays will be expanded to include film and pictures from Yugoslavia if received in time.

Dr. Ioanid believes that such materials are available from UDBA, the Yugoslav Secret Police, but that they have not been released so far because of the former, Titoist policy making this subject a taboo. As noted above, the Museum has approached the Yugoslav Government on many occasions for these materials but with no success. The Yugoslavs, aside from some artifacts obtained by Clara Mandich, have been nonresponsive.

WE NEED AN EXECUTIVE ORDER (OR WHATEVER OTHER PAPERS ARE APPROPRIATE ACCORDING TO YUGOSLAVIA'S FEDERAL RULES OF PROCEDURE) FROM YOU TO UDBA AND ANY AND ALL OTHER APPROPRIATE GROUPS OR PARTIES DIRECTING THE IMMEDIATE RELEASE OF ALL WAR-ERA FILM FOOTAGE AND PHOTO STILLS PERTAINING TO SERB VICTIMS OF THE HOLOCAUST. Radio Television Belgrade may also be able to help. I will speak to you about transport and other details -- in the future we will also need books, articles, records of personal stories, private pictures, etc...

We also need to arrange funding for Dr. Jovan Mirkovic, former director of the Holocaust Museum in Jasenovac (now a refugee in Belgrade), to come to Washington and make sure that all these materials are correctly identified.

For now, the release of this film footage and pictures is the only detail which requires IMMEDIATE ATTENTION.

I think that you will agree that this is of vital importance.

Do not know where you will be staying in NY. Pls advise.

URGENT. You must prepare a letter to Sec Genl UN, outlining potential horrors of winter to the people, schools, hospitals, refugees etc. Emphasize both the cold, people unable to get ~~medical care, that Serbian citizens who have taken 400,000~~ refugees in their homes -- including 90,000 muslims -- are going ~~to have to put them out as they cannot feed them any longer and~~ heat is scarce. Everything you can must be included.

Send copies to each member of the Sec Council, the EC Members, the USA etc.

Will discuss more when you phone me early Mon am from NY. This
