Law and Business Administration

Foreword

THE publishing of your yearbook, The Reporter, signifies the proximity of Graduation and the drawing to a close of another milestone in your quest for knowledge and the building of a happy future. As the goal draws nigh we, the Editors of your "book of memories", desire to express our best wishes for the future success of each and everyone of you, and to extend the felicitations that accompany "a job well done."

Dedication

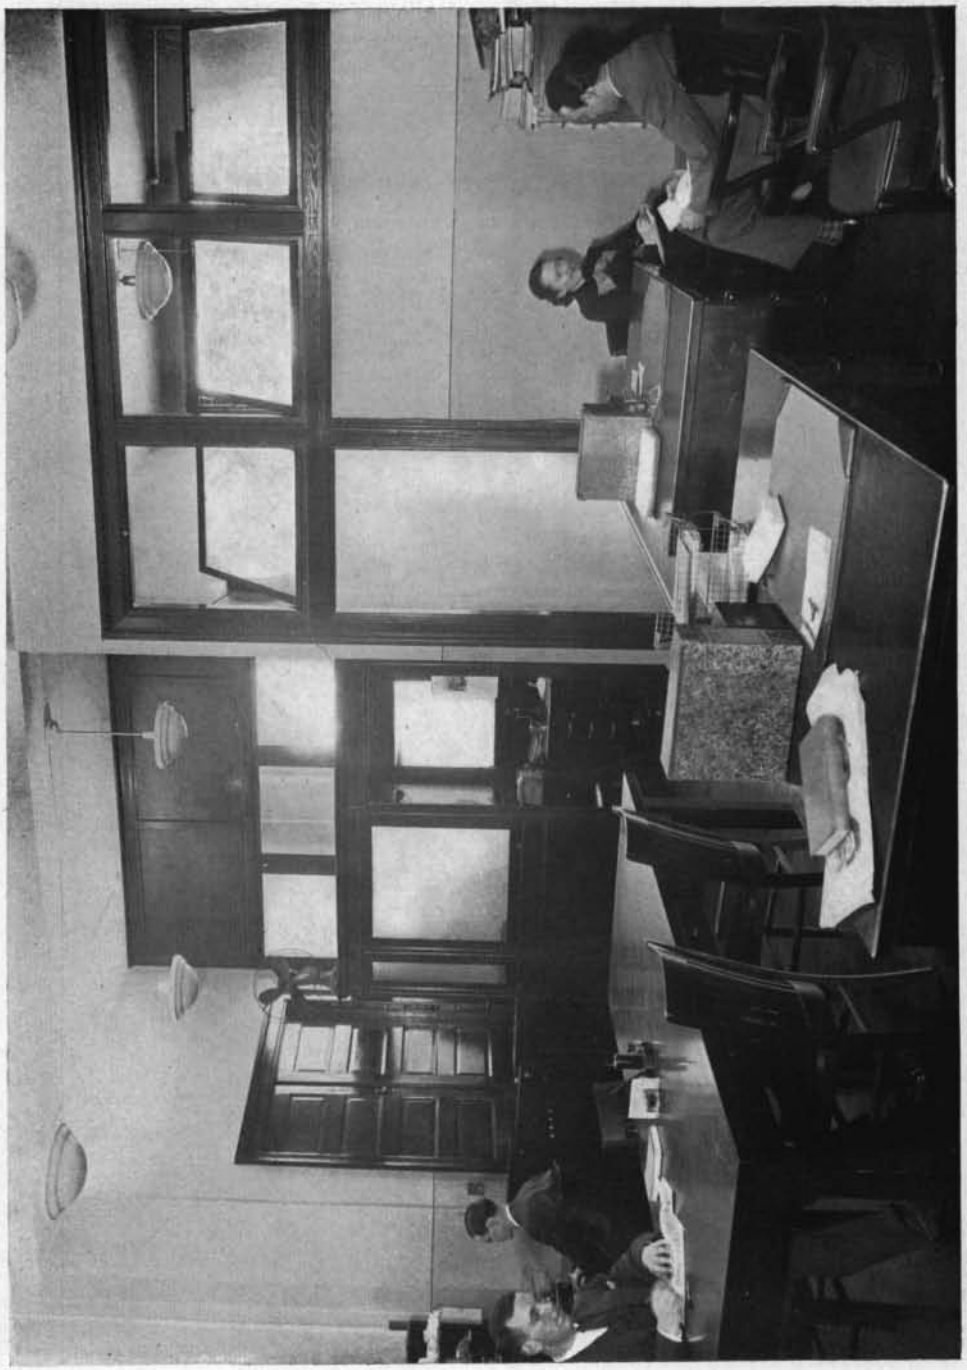

THE Class of 1937 dedicates this year's issue of "The Reporter" to Wendell D. Allen. His unfailing good humor and his sincere efforts in our behalf have earned him a debt of gratitude which the Class of 1937 can never hope to repay.

WILBUR F. SMITH, LL.B., LITT.D.
President Emeritus of the University

R. LORAN LANGSDALE, A.B., LL.B.
Treasurer of the University

To the Graduates of 1937:

You have my heartiest congratulations for successfully completing your courses of study. It has been difficult for many of you to attend classes in addition to performing other duties. However, realization of your accomplishments under such circumstances should spur you on to greater achievements.

Your activities have added to the development of the University. The school is better off because of your having been a part of it. We hope that you, as alumni, will continue an active interest in behalf of your alma mater.

I wish you much success in all of your future undertakings.

B. Herbert Brown, Jr.
Vice-President

Message From Dean Lasky:

Dear Graduates,

The time for caps and gowns — awards and diplomas, congratulations, tears and parting of ways—is here. At graduation time I am always moved by a peculiar sentiment —a sentiment that is subject to no analysis. Perhaps this sentiment, for lack of a better word, may be called mellowness. And why not? Why should we not feel mellow and sentimental about you graduates? You have spent some of your most important years with us. Years in which we hope that we have benefited one another. Years in which we have shared your troubles, been interested in your problems, and have made every effort to understand your desires. Such proximity cannot be waved aside or forgotten even by anything so formal as commencement exercises. My mellowness is therefore brought about, perhaps, by the admiration and the friendship that I should like to know we have for one another and which I believe will prove to be permanent.

It is my earnest hope that in later life when you reflect upon your years of study at the University that you may be imbued with the same spirit and friendship which we at the University have for you.

May time and fate be kind to you and may this, literally, be the commencement of a happy and full life.

Louis M. Lasky
Dean

To the Law Class of 1937:

February 27, 1937

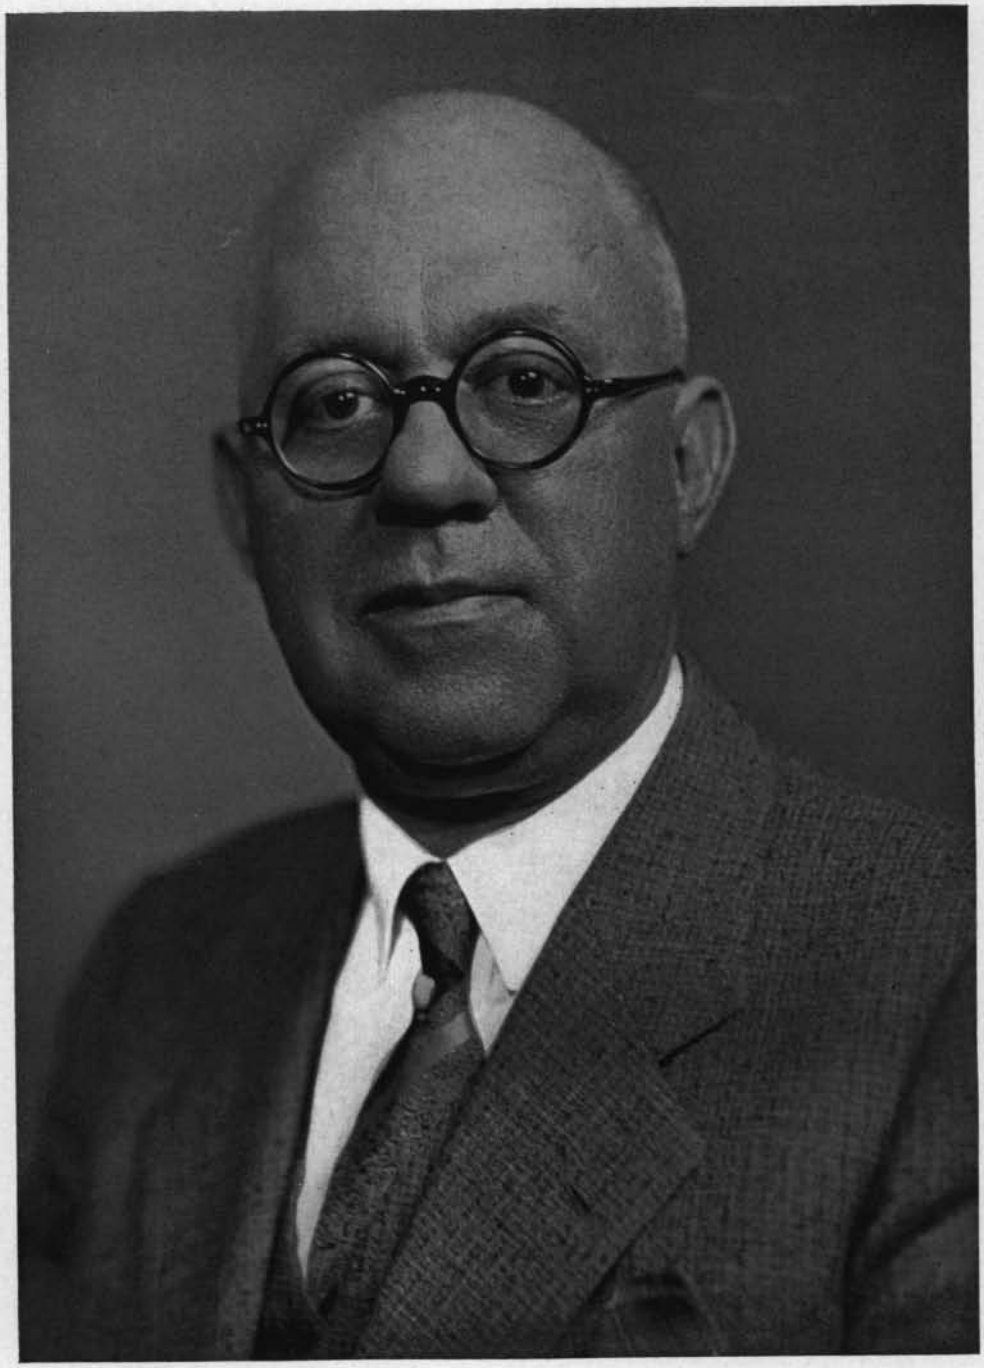

You tell me that you have made me your Honorary President. You ought not to have done this. Yet, I confess I like it and love it. You might have named any one of many others who would have meant more to you. You could, however, not have chosen any one to whom it meant more. To be so singled out by nearly four score young men, his pupils, is something that your old teacher will cherish as long as his life lasts.

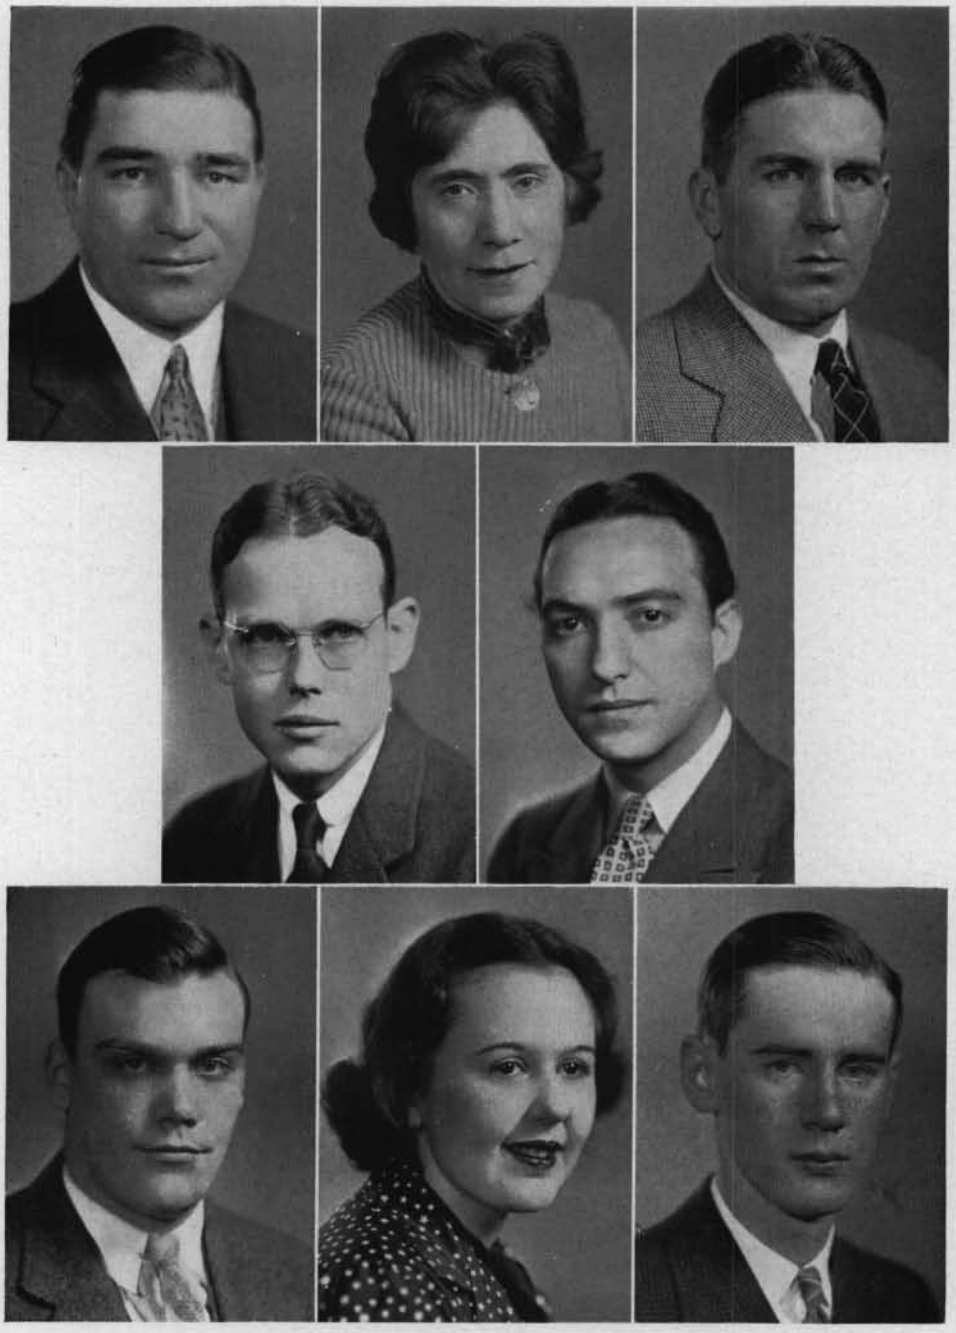

I know that you are trained and equipped to climb high and to enjoy life. It is the hope and prayer of all of us, your teachers, that we have made you feel that you ought to make it your greatest aim, to be good men and useful citizens.

Assuring you of my genuine gratitude, I am your proud and appreciative Honorary President,

William Milnes Maloy,
Dean

AFTER a student has spent three or four years day after day, or night after night in a university he never, so far as the administration is concerned, severs, completely, his connection with the school. He has become a part of it and the school has become a part of him. You will realize this fact even more strongly after graduation, especially in the fall of the year when the habits that you have formed during a period of years seem to be broken off with one quick stroke.

Because of this feeling that the administration and the graduates should have for each other we ask you not to forget us; we ask you to stop in and say hello! Let us hear from you!

The Administration

History of the University

IT is with much gratification that we take this opportunity to resound the historical development of the University of Baltimore. Although our school is not one of the oldest it is aged with accomplishments.

The University of Baltimore is outstanding in educational service to the City of Baltimore and the State of Maryland.

The institution has enjoyed a phenomenal growth and has weathered the storm of the depression years until it now occupies a position of stabilized educational importance in the community.

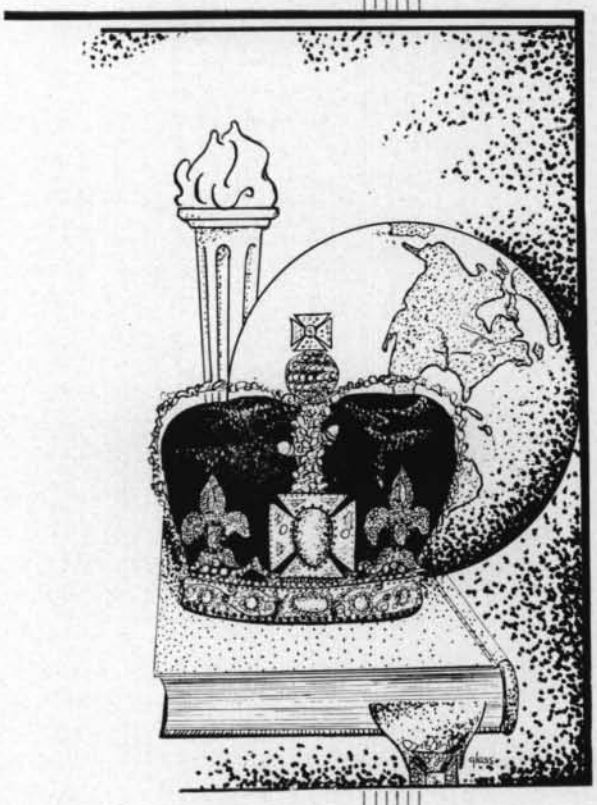

The University was founded by a group of leading Baltimore educators and professional men in response to the desires of a number of citizens like ourselves, who wanted the educational opportunities that a school with urban university ideals could offer. Such an institution did not exist in Baltimore prior to the birth of the University of Baltimore.

The founding of the University of Baltimore has proved to be justifiable, for today the school has a large student body, teaching staff, and alumni. Its academic arrangement comprises more than ten undergraduate departments of college grade, housed in a new home on North Howard Street to which the University moved in 1929 when it outgrew the quarters on Mt. Vernon Place.

Numbered among the faculty members who helped to mold the foundation of our careers are some of the highest ranking educators, business leaders, judges, lawyers, accountants and other professional men and women in the State.

We have visions of the University becoming a truly large urban institution. We know that with the aggressive spirit behind the school, facilities will soon be obtained in which to house additional academic departments. At this writing the University of Baltimore expects to inaugurate soon a branch of a graduate school.

Those of us who have attended the University during the past three years have watched its continued growth as a result of the sincere efforts of Mr. R. Loran Langsdale, Treasurer; Dean William Milnes Maloy; Dean Louis M. Lasky and Vice-President B. Herbert Brown, Jr., with the co-operation of the other administrative officers under the leadership of the Board of Trustees and with the help of the general student body. There has been an earnest effort to improve and we can truthfully say that our Alma Mater has grown both spiritually and physically during the years of our attendance.

History of the Class of 1937

HOW often in future years will we the graduating Law Class of 1937 revert in reminiscences to the beautiful Fall day of September 14, 1934 when we as a class of approximately 200 members assembled in the amphitheatrical lecture room on the second floor of the University of Baltimore on Howard street? As one of the high lights in our reminiscences of our Alma Mater we will recall the palpitation of our hearts which occurred when Professor Edgett, who initiated us into the mysteries of the Law, would pounce verbally upon the luckless Freshman who might happen to ask an unnecessary or perchance foolish question. From the very outset the Class of 1937 set its course in a direction from which it has never deterred and which helped to accomplish changes which a less determined class could never have hoped to do. We of the Class of 1937 feel that we have made a definite contribution to the future of the University of Baltimore. We all look back with pleasure to the hard study that was required of us to pass such hurdles as Messrs. Victor Cook, of Domestic Relation fame; John H. Hessey, with his Torts; James Cullen, with his fungible goods et al. from his ally the Sales Act; and who will forget the formidable appearance the Mr. J. Purdon Wright made with his Poe on Pleading and how glad we were to be past such milestones in the law curricula. During the first year the following members of the class were elected to office---Maurice du Bois, President; H. C. Birkhead, Vice-President; Miss Alice Elliott, Secretary; Albert Smith, Treasurer; W. Hipp, Sergeant-at-Arms; and Messrs. Albert Snitzer, Jr. and Jerome Goldberg on the Student Council.

With the coming of the second year our ranks began to dwindle materially and at the start of the first semester we numbered only about 125 members. Though we had felt that things were a bit tough the first year, we knew they were really so in this year. In general "dry" subjects were the order of the day and many of us were put into a semi-conscious state by some of the lectures, though humorous situations too were not infrequent. For example, who will forget the playful boys who used to push the row of chairs in front of them into such positions that sitting in them was impossible much less concentration on the immediate topic under consideration and coupled with such was the never to be forgotten extemporaneous masterpiece by Southey Miles, concerning the necessity for having a sense of humor even though studying law. Probably none of us will forget the case book that the Hon. Judge O'Dunne, used though it had been out of print for about a half a century. Likewise many of us will recall the precepts of the Negotiable Instrument Act, with a smile when we recall the "Now Gentlemen, let us suppose----" as only Mr. Waters could enunciate it. There were indeed many pitfalls this year, but after a closer acquaintance with the subjects in question we are ready to admit that they were not quite as bad as pictured to us by our senior classmen. In the wide open election held during the early part of the year, Maurice du Bois, again was honored with the Presidency; C. Bowie Rose, broke into the public eye with the Vice-Presidency; Dulany Foster was Secretary; Sam Stokes, the genial comedian, as Treasurer; W. Hipp, again Sergeant-at -Arms; and on the Student Council, Messrs. L. P. Bortner, A. Gordon Boone and Charles J. Nichols.

As we entered the last lap of our Law Studies we were most elated to be at last able to see the much desired goal in the haze of the distance, though we were a bit disappointed in the number of our friends who did not for various reasons again become members of the class of 1937. In this year the course became or, at least, seemed to become a bit easier though there were several professors who came to us with reputations for being a bit exacting and accordingly we watched our steps pretty carefully in those classes. During this year the Honor Case was argued before the Honorable Judges Edward Dickerson, William Lawrence, and R. Adams and to prove the old adage that the last shall be first, the aformentioned judges unanimously picked as the winner of the case William A. Kelly, who had argued last of all. The other co-finalists were Messrs. Solomon Liss, Charles J. Nichols, J. Joseph Callahan, John Angelo Pentz, and Howard M. Smith. Another important event of the year was the election of the highest 10 per cent of the class, as regards scholastic standing, to membership in the Heuisler Honor Society. Competition was extremely close and the very small percentage of two-one hundredths of one per cent was the difference in averages separating the last to make the society from the next eligible contender who had to be eliminated due to the limitation on numbers based on the total membership of the class. And, don't forget the lowest man to make the grade had an average of over 91. The following men were elected to the Society: Charles J. Nichols, William A. Kelly, Solomon Liss, Milton Burns Cole, Maurice du Bois, John Angelo Pentz, Joseph Callahan, C. LeRoy Miller, Joseph Martin, and David Deiner. In the election for class officers during this year there was a very considerable amount of interest and when the smoke of battle had cleared away it was seen that Maurice du Bois had been elected President for the third successive year by the biggest margin of any previous year and Alexander Stark was given the Vice-Presidency with Milton Cole as Secretary; King Stromberg, as Treasurer; and Benjamin Weston, as Sergeant-at-Arms; for the Student Council, Messrs. L. P. Bortner, Charles J. Nichols, William Collier, Jr., Samuel Litman, and Editor of the yearbook, Solomon Liss. In summation it can be fairly said that though the past few years of our University life have been quite tedious, in many respects there have also been many instances of lighter moments that have brought pleasure and the wealth of friendships formed during these past few years of close association are, in themselves, worth the inconveniences which we have had to endure in many ways as a direct result of our ambitions to know the Law and achieve success in that honored profession. It is to be hoped that reunions of this class will be held at periodic intervals in the future.

Day School Class History

IN September of 1933 a group of bewildered and apprehensive young men and young women congregated in Room 105 to begin the trial and tribulation of college. Within a few weeks they had become accustomed to the daily routine, and began their experiences with the much dreaded Sophomores. As much as the lowly Frosh rebelled the paddle was ever handy and much used, and the Rat Rules stayed on until Thanksgiving.The year rolled on its accustomed way, and finished in a blaze of fun and frolic at the June Ball with Glen Gray and his Orchestra.

At the opening day of the Sophomore Year the class of 1937 returned, robed in a new dignity, but having in their hearts a feeling of revenge for the indignities suffered the year before. The only drawback was in the absence of a few familiar faces. The Sophs were soon robbed of their new found glory, for the new Frosh revolted, and within a few weeks of the opening day the rat rules were abolished. The second year ended with the annual June Ball, this time featuring Little Jack Little and his Band.

The Junior year was more or less one of little importance for the students as a class. Studies were difficult and had to be pursued rather assiduously.

Then began the final lap in the college grind. The year opened auspiciously with the election of Harold "Flash" Hecker as class president; William Snyder, vice-president; Robert Snyder, treasurer. James Geddes, another senior, was elected as Student Council President. A new regime of increased intra-murals and student activities entered its realm, and with it increased student interest. The students spent their idle hours in competition with each other for intra-mural sports awards, and their evenings either in study, or in cheering on our successful basketball team. The week ends were a round of dances, parties, and festivities, Maryland Casualty—Rennert Hotel—Cadoa—Mt. Holly Inn,—all scenes of our final flings at college days. Then exams. Graduation.

And so the time went by. We clung desperately to the last fleeting hours, but now that school is over we look back in retrospection over four short years of friendship as the result of our labors. We shall always appreciate the sincere efforts of the faculty and administration of the University to aid us in every manner possible. Their endeavors to assist and encourage us shall live in our memories forever.

Message From The Editors

WE, the editors of this, the 1937 REPORTER, present it to you in the hope that it be received with graciousness and judged with tolerance.

With little in the way of precedent to guide us, we have tried honestly and earnestly to give you a book which will be of lasting and increasing value to you. Features we have included—as many as possible—yet we have essayed to avoid the trite and juvenile.

If you be tolerant of our offspring we are satisfied; if you be satisfied we are grateful.

Day School Student Council

STUDENT Councils of the future may well look back upon this year's body as a model of industry and cooperation. And it was because of this industry and sincere cooperation with the Administration that the school enjoyed the most successful social and extra-curricula season since the institution's beginning.

Under the judicious leadership of its president, James A. Geddes, the council in conjunction with the Administration introduced many new features into the program of activities.

Most important of these changes was the use of a student activities card. The card admitted the student to the University's dances given every month, to all home athletic games, school plays, and to the numerous other activities previously not given to members of the student body. The purchase of the card also included subscriptions to the two official publications, "The Baloo," the campus weekly, and "The Maroon Bee," the comic monthly.

The student council has proved a very necessary medium between the Administration and the student body by acting as a clearing house for the wishes of the two groups and by helping to obtain the maximum of cooperation between them.

This council has, of course, made mistakes but one thing stands out, however, as a result of its achievements and that is that it has kept in step with the rapid growth of the institution.

Night School Student Council

THE role of "masterful inactivity" usually assigned to the Student Council in previous years, was removed during the current school year by its active participation in matters vitally important to the students and the school as a whole. Those grievances of the students which justified action by the administrative branch of the school were brought to the attention of those in authority and settled to the satisfaction of all concerned. The continued success of he Student Council in succeeding years will exist only so long as there remains a spirit of cooperation and understanding between the student body and the administrative division of the school.

The University Players

WITH the presentation of "Whistling in the Dark" the University of Baltimore Players, undergraduate dramatic group, announces to the world that they were finishing their fourth consecutive season in the best possible shape.

Founded in 1932 by Clarice Burkholder, of the Law School and directed by David Lovett an instructor in English at the University, the group chose for its first vehicle "The Travelers", a one-act play by Booth Tarkington. This initial attempt was followed by a dance.

The following year saw them essaying their first three-act play, a comedy by James Gleason entitled "Is Zat So?" So successful were they that the three-act play has been their media ever since.

At the close of this the "Players" second season, Miss Burkholder, who had led the organization for its first two years, graduated. Arthur Weinberg succeeded her as president.

In the three years that Weinberg has led the group first as president and later as director, they have presented "June Moon" by George Kaufman and Ring Lardner, "Three Cornered Moon" by Gertrude Tonkonogy, and "Whistling in the Dark" by Lawrence Gross and Edward Childs Carpenter. The last named play was substituted at the last moment for Kenyon Nicholson's "The Barker" when this play "for reasons of discretion" was abandoned.

The future of the "Players" is bright. Without a stage, without technical equipment of any kind, an untrained group of students has managed to turn out creditable productions of plays that would have taxed the resources of larger, richer, and far more experienced organizations. They have firmly established themselves as a recognized undergraduate activity, have won the support and respect of the student body, the faculty, and the administration; and will enter their fifth season, next year, prepared to carry out a larger and more comprehensive program than ever before.

Boys Basketball

UNDER the able direction of Head Coach John M. Ogden and his assistant Charles E. (Bucky) Miller the University of Baltimore Bees have closed what has been the most successful season in the history of basketball at the University. The Bees won 19 games out of a total of 21 played for the grand percentage of .905. Major victories were scored against U. of Tennessee, Southeastern Conference League champions; Mt. St. Mary's Maryland Collegiate League champions, and Catholic U. of Washington.

Vic Probst, All Maryland Center and Maryland's only All-American was the State leader in scoring for the third consecutive year with 123 field goals and 37 foul shots. This made a total of 283 points and Ed (Mush) Pulvino with 178 points were third and fourth respectively in State scoring.

The season opened at the Y.M.H.A. against Southeastern U. of Washington who were trampled 42-28. Mike Pellino, freshman guard from Rochester led the scoring with 19 points. Vic Probst, Ed Pulvino, George Reisinger and Ralph Brown also starred.

In their next game the Maroons swamped Potomac State Teachers by 57-28. The combination of Probst, Pulvino and Pellino proved too fast and accurate for the Pennsylvania teachers. Probst scored 15 points, Pellino 13, and Pulvino 12.

Two games were played with the Maryland State Teacher's College at Towson with the Bees taking the first by 58-26 and walloping the Teachers in the second to the tune of 49-22. Vic Probst scored 20 points in each game with Danny Friedman scoring 12 in the first and Mike Pellino with 10 in the second.

The Bees easily defeated Wilson Teachers of Washington 46-18 in their next game.

After a journey to Emmitsburg the Bees collided with Mt. St. Mary's, Maryland Collegiate League Champions and in one of the hardest fought games of the season defeated the Mounts 28-27. The size of the gym baffled the Bees and it was not until the middle of the game that they really got started.

Maryland and Navy were the next two scheduled opponents but only the game against Navy was played. Due to injuries and a divergence in eligibility rules only 3 of the 12 men on the squad were available. The Maryland game was called off but Navy was met and the crippled Bees absorbed a 36-7 lacing.

Western Maryland was handed two defeats by the University of Baltimore tossers. The first was a close, hard fought game ending in a 38-35 victory for the Bees. The three P's (Probst, Pellino, and Pulvino) proved too much for the Green Terrors. In the second tilt the Maroons swamped Western Maryland 57-52. A red-hot trio made up of Probst, Pellino, and Friedman made life miserable for the Terrors.

Assistant Coach Bucky Miller led his charges to a hard-fought victory over the U. of Delaware Blue Hens by the score of 44-35. George Reisinger played a great floor game and scored 9 points. Probst with 14 points was again high scorer.

In their next game the U. of B. met an unexpected tartar in the U. of Newark. Trailing by 14 points with less than 3 minutes to play, Danny Friedman uncorked 3 successive long shots followed by goals by Probst and Pellino to score 16 points and take the most thrilling game of the season 46-44.

The Deaf-Mutes of Gallaudet College of Washington were snowed under to the tune of 55-25 with Probst and Pellino scoring 17 and 12 points respectively.

In its next encounter the U. of B. met the highly touted Tennessee quint, 1936 champions of the Southeastern Conference and one of he finest teams in the country. This game marked the first Tennessee athletic invasion of Baltimore. The first half produced exceptionally fast open offensive play with the Maroons always just a jump ahead of the Vols. The second half was much harder played with the Bees on the defensive protecting a 7 point lead carried over from the first half. The Bees took the game 37-34 after some of the finest cage play ever seen in Baltimore. Reisinger and Pellino with 12 and 10 points respectively, led the scorers while Vic Probst played a marvelous floor game and got possession of 2/3 of the rebounds.

The Maroons traveled to the Eastern Shore to administer a licking to Washington College 38-29. The three P's were again outstanding scoring a total of 30 points.

Catholic U. of Washington handed the U. of B. tossers their only real defeat of the season by taking their measure 56-50. Inability to guard Schmarr, burly forward of the Cardinals, cost the Bees the victory since he scored 23 points. Pellino with 18 points and Pulvino with 16 points led the Maroon scorers.

John Marshall College of N. J. was the next victim of the Bees 57-37. Pellino, with his star play making and Probst's dead-eye shooting were outstanding for the Bees. Probst scored 28 points with Pellino scoring 12.

The Bees next met and defeated Swarthmore College of Pa., 36-22. They held a lead of 17-3 at half-time and coasted the rest of the way.

The Maroons left for N. Y. on their longest trip of the season and there repeated previous victories over John Marshall College and the University of Newark. The scores were 49 to 25 and 45 to 29.

Baltimore gained its desired revenge over Catholic University by swamping them in a return game 58-35. The Bees opened up a wide lead in the first few minutes of the game and were never headed. Vic Probst led the scoring with 20 points closely followed by Pulvino with 14 points. Mike Pellino played his greatest floor game of the season. Ralph Brown played a great game at guard holding down C. U's star, Herb Schmarr.

The Maroon Bees closed their season by trouncing Wilson College 54-19. Vic Probst led the bombardment with 19 points.

The 1936-37 basketball season produced the finest team ever to represent the University of Baltimore in intercollegiate sports. Vic Probst was picked on the all-state team for the third successive year and was a strong candidate for All-American Honors. Mike Pellino play-builder extra-ordinaire was also picked on the All-State team, with Ed Pulvino, Ralph Brown, and George Reisinger getting honorable mention from most of the writers. The U. of B. is looking forward to a highly successful season next with Pellion, Pulvino, Reisinger, Brown, Wilkinson, Shillingford, Cully, Hyatt and O'Dell returning. These men will no doubt fill the holes left by the graduation of Vic Probst, Danny Friedman, Jim Lackey, and Kenneth Lee. In closing may we say just a word about the subs and reserves on the team. They played great ball when called upon and helped "Head" Coach, Jack Ogden and assistant Coach, Bucky Miller to obtain a record of which they may well be proud.

The Bees scored a total of 952 points to 639 for the opposition.

Girls Basketball

THREE wins, one tie and one lose was the official scoring for the University of Baltimore co-ed basketball team this season. "Getie" Levinson, night school law senior, took a handful of material and with small prospects of a successful season, whipped the team into fine shape.

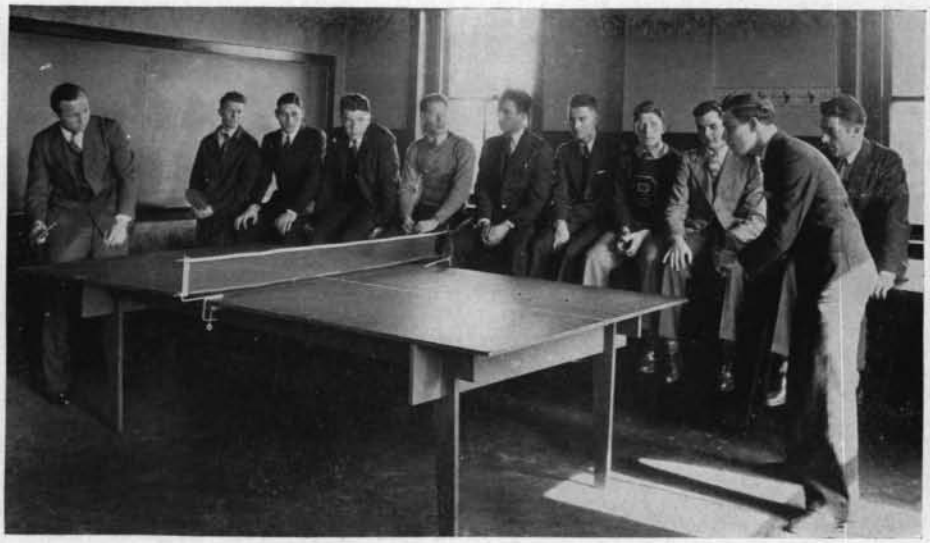

Outstanding on the team was Ruth Turner, a freshman in the night school business division, who showed marked ability in her position as forward. Credit is also due to Miriam Patz, Mina Dietz, Theresa Siejack, Marie Schmidt, "Getie" Levinson, Marjorie Henzler, Mirian MacDonald, and Joan Orth for their display of fight and spirit.

The first victory for the season was the game played with the Y. W. C. A. Ruth Turner carried off the honors with seventeen points, Miriam Patz following closely with thirteen points. The two Y. W. C. A. forwards were held in check by Theresa Siejack and "Getie" Levinson, guards, and were only able to make eleven points. The final score was 30-11.

Frostburg State Teachers College proved to be too skillful for the U. of B. sextet and won by a score of 28-9.

Two games were played with Salisbury State Teachers College, the first one ending with the score of 20-20. This was a thriller from start to finish. The U. of B. held the lead at the half with a score of 12-7. The Salisbury team rallied and, with one minute to play, the score was 20-16 in favor of Salisbury. Marie Schmidt came through with a field goal and Ruth Turner followed with another. The second game was played in Baltimore, and was won by the Co-ed Bees by the one-sided score of 21-9.

Taking into consideration the scarcity of material and the lack of our own gym the girls are to be congratulated for a fine season.

Intra-Mural Athletics

THE reorganization of intramurals gave to the student body the most active year that it has ever had. A system of awards was worked out and the winning students were presented keys, pins, bracelets, theatre tickets, and football tickets.

Webster Lucas, former football star of Western Maryland College, was selected to coach and supervise the extra-curricular activities of the students. He opened the fall season with a horseshoe tournament, tried to control the annual freshmen-sophomore football riot, organized the intramural basketball teams, and carried the season along with ping pong, badminton, and other athletic activities.

Lewis Hess had been holding sway over the horseshoe slingers for quite a few years but Robert Grant stepped in on the fatal day of October 30, and licked Lew. The outcome of the contest had evoked so much comment that a prize worth winning was promised to the victor by the activities board.

And so Bob Grant was handed a ticket to the Navy-Notre Dame football game.

The lowly Frosh were forced by the lordly sophomores to wear Maroon caps, red ties, and to keep their trousers' legs well rolled up. They had a chance to have a halt called upon their tortures by beating the sophs in a football game.

They did their best in the game but the upperclassmen were as determined that they too should win so that when the final whistle shrilled the score stood 6-6.

The "Rats" were broken hearted but their masters relented a short time later and the newcomers became men.

The co-eds entered the competitive field in a ping pong contest and the incumbent champion, Lillian Hirschler, lost her crown. Joan Orth of the freshman class with her devastating forehand smash came out on top of the heap and was awarded a bracelet with the seal of the school on it.

Another standing champion in ping pong was upset by a newcomer when Philip Klein was driven from the table by Richard Mettee. Dick received as his award a ticket to the Western Maryland football game.

Joan Orth captured another prize when she split first money with Jose Mayol in the amateur contest held at the Cadoa during the Student Council Dance.

The intellectuals were given a chance in a spelling bee with Max Freedman topping Robert Russell. They were awarded tickets to the theatre.

Ruth Goldstein won the intramural medal for girls' badminton when she came out victor in the tournament. The co-eds responded to this contest in a body so that for some weeks no one had an idea who would be the final winner.

The most popular of the intramurals was the basketball tournament with six teams competing for first place. The squads played two elimination runs with the "Net Profits" and the "Net Assets" meeting in the playoff. The "Net Assets" barely won the game by a score of 19-17.

The following members of the winning team were awarded intramural medals: Smith (Captain), Rosenfield, Behrman, Scheiner, Paparelli, Kratz, and Taylor.

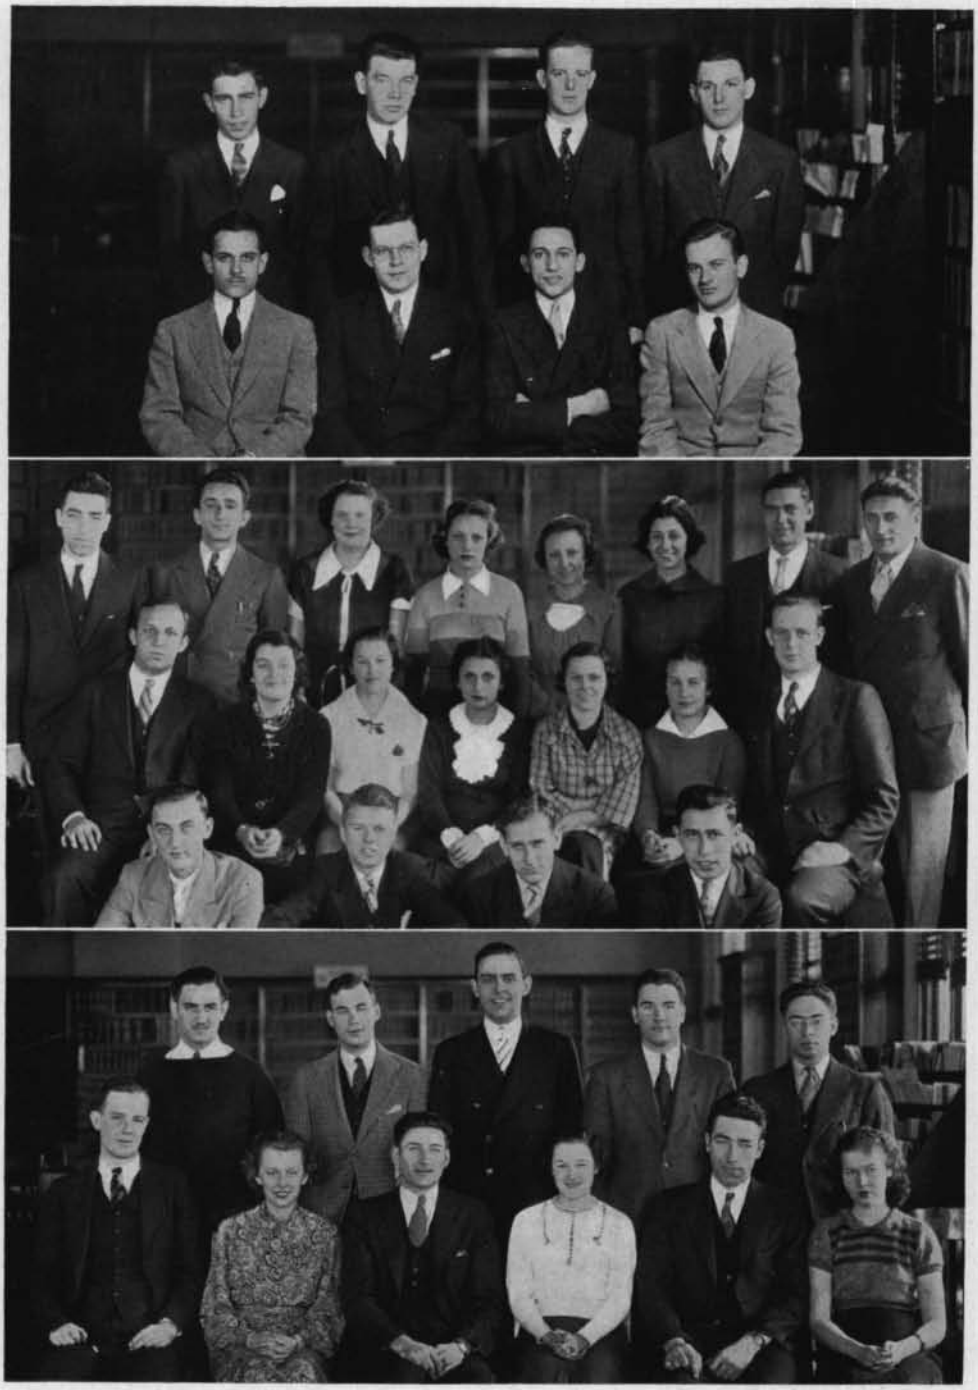

There were fifteen bowling teams with two men on each team. Ed Taylor and Bob Snyder made up the winning combination and were awarded intramural medals.

Harold Hecker was the winner of the boys' badminton contest and Bob Katz was the runner up. Appreciating the play of the contestants Dr. G. Wilson Shaffer head of the psychology department and outstanding player in the city, offered a new racquet to any of them who could beat him in a game. Several of those who ran high in the tournament tried but were outclassed even when Shaffer spotted them a number of points.

The spring season drew to a close with softball teams taking to the lots and the completing of the plans giving bicycle enthusiasts a chance to try their skill.

Assisting Webster Lucas were Ruth Goldstein and Ed Wieciech. They are ready to close the books on a year full of activities and are now planning for a fuller calender during the coming term.

The Women's League

WITH a history of only one year, the Women's League can look back on a program of successful monthly meetings and outstanding activities. Sponsored by Women's Advisor Florence Koeder, this is the first attempt for a united club of co-eds of Day and Night Divisions.

Even before electing officers, the girls organized and carried out plans for two projects. Sixty guests including alumnae and wives of officials and faculty members attended their first, a tea to welcome Freshmen girls.

Getie Levinson and Marjorie Henzler were co-chairmen of the Christmas party and were jointly responsible for the pleasant evening spent by the still unorganized group. Their co-workers included Adele Welfeld, Ruth Goldstein, Sylvia Berman, M. Louise Evert, Helen Emig, Theresa Siejack, Alice R. Elliott, Marian MacDonald and Jean Kraus. Singing of Christmas carols, musical solos, exchange of small gifts and refreshments were included in the program. Both the tea and the party were held at a local hotel.

It was not until the second half of the year that the League felt itself prepared to elect officers. They chose the following to lead their organization: Getie Levinson, president; Marian MacDonald, vice-officer; Marjorie Henzler, secretary; and Helen Emig, treasurer.

The election in February was followed by another business meeting in March at which time the constitution, drawn up by Miriam Falk, was ratified and plans were laid for two other activities, the card party and the mother-daughter banquet. The committees appointed at that time included: Marian MacDonald, Leatrice Jacobs, Joan Orth and Francis Klein.

Plans are now being made for the second year of club work which should emulate the success of the initial term since most of the members will return in the fall.

FraternitieS

Inter-Fraternity Board

THE Inter-Fraternity Board was organized sometime ago for the primary purpose of keeping the societies in contact with one another so the various social functions would not conflict. The Board set the dates for the "Rush" season and the "Smokers" and approved the date of the sorority tea. As there is only one legal sorority in the University this presented no problem.

A dance was held at the Maryland Casualty in February which was sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Board in conjunction with the University.

The season was very successful due to the splendid cooperation of all the Fraternities who through their respective members were represented on the Inter-Fraternity Board.

Phi Delta Tau

THE Phi Delta Tau fraternity is an organization as old as the University of Baltimore, itself boasting many fraters who are alumni of the school in addition to those who currently attend the school.

Organized in 1927, the fraternity has made rapid strides, and today numbers over one hundred members. These men are representatives of the three great Baltimore schools, Johns Hopkins University, University of Baltimore, University of Maryland and in the group are numerous lawyers, doctors, accountants and dentists. This year over thirty of the members of Phi Delta Tau are attending the University of Baltimore and many of them leading students in extra-curricular activities, as well as scholastically.

The fraternity has made great progress in the past year and is ranged as one of the leading professional organizations of the city.

Gamma Eta Sigma

THE Gamma Eta Sigma Fraternity was organized at New York University in 1920, since which time its growth has been steady and consistent.

Our aims to improve the scholastic ability of our members have met with success, both in the universities and in state bar and certified public accounting examinations.

The policy of the fraternity to make scholastic awards in the various schools in which we are located, has been continued, and we feel that all fraternities should seriously consider adopting a similar policy.

The officers of the Delta Chapter located at the University of Baltimore for the year 1936-1937 are as follows:

OFFICERS

High Priest.....George Hertzbach
Chancellor.....Benjamin G. Miller
Vice-Chancellor.....Meyer Bronstein

Kappa Epsilon Phi

IN 1927 a group of students in the Law School of the University of Baltimore, who had been associated as classmates for several years, desired this association to continue after graduating from school, and as a result a fraternity was organized. The charter members were Joseph H. Colvin, Walter A. Feldman, Lois Straus, Gilbert I. Friedel, and the late Irving Davidson.

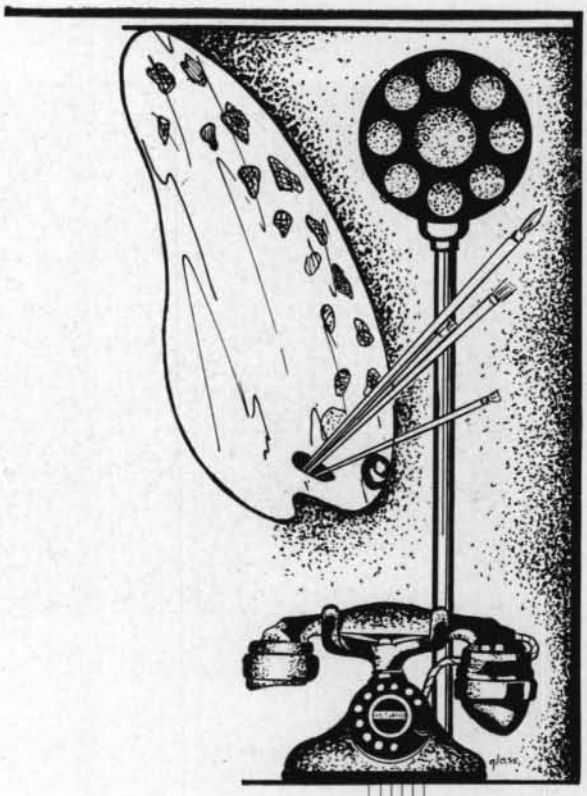

After the organization of this local group, which was the first fraternity at the University of Baltimore, it received a bid to the Kappa Epsilon Phi, a national legal fraternity, and after approval by the Board of Trustees of the school, such bid was accepted and we became an integral part of this national legal fraternity, which has chapters in many of the leading law schools and universities of the country.

The Fraternity is limited strictly to students of the legal profession.

The Fraternity now has a membership of over sixty, and is growing steadily.

The present officers are:

Leon Rosenthal.....Supreme Justice
Joseph D. Weiner.....Justice
Sergeant-at-Arms ..... Edward Azrael
Secretary.....Jerry Katz

DON'T LET YOUR CASE SLIDE OUT FROM UNDERNEATH YOU

because it is not based on sound authority

THE LAWYER whose case is wrecked because he bases it on ill-considered authority has no convenient snow bank to cushion the shock.

This cannot happen to you if you own AMERICAN LAW REPORTS. One of the 10,660 annotations on all practical questions coming up in your practice will show you, in a few minutes' reading time, the strength or weakness of your case.

Says one user:

"The annotations are particularly valuable because there are numerous questions arising which have not been passed upon by the Supreme Court of our State, and one is able to determine, in a short time, what the law is, on the particular point involved, in other States, and if there are conflicting lines of authority, one is able to determine which line of authority the Courts of this State are most likely to follow."

A request on your letterhead will bring you full information.
