DEDIC

Baltimore. The "Living City," containing cultural influences from Fells Point to Mount Vernon and Bolton Hill, truly reflects a town in constant change and metamorphosis. Similarly, the University of Baltimore in the past decades has progressed to become a viable institution of higher learning.

ATION

This yearbook will put fifty years of history into "RETROSPECT" by giving a peek into the distant past and recapturing the thoughts of yesterday. Therefore, the dedication of this book goes, not to any particular individual, but to all those who have contributed toward making Baltimore the "living city" that it is today.

Top Left: partially paved cobblestone street in Fells Point.
Middle: Fruit huckster in Little Italy.
Lower Left: Bolton Hill fountain off of Park Ave.

Top Left: typical Little Italy street scene.
Top Right: water mules in Baltimore's Harbor.
Middle Left: gardens of Mount Vernon Center; tree-lined walk in Bolton Hill.
Middle Right: sidewalk trucker in Fells Point.
Lower Left: sea-going vessel of yesterday.
Lower Right: local foam house.

of Change

The history of the University of Baltimore has been one of constant change. Physically it has grown from a four story row house located at St. Paul and Mount Vernon to a complex of buildings and athletic facilties many times the school's original size. Academically the University has expanded from an evening professional school offering courses in business and law, to a fully accredited university with eight separate degree programs. In addition to these physical and academic changes there have been changes in the students of the University. In the early years of the school, the students were drawn from the business world, however today's students come from a wide spectrum of backgrounds. Just as the make-up of the student body has changed, so too have their modes of dress, and their interests.

Left: The four story row house where the U. of B. opened its doors for the first time.

Above Right: A member of the Paddock Club after a day's outing.
Right: Howard Hall, formerly the home of the Baltimore College of Dentistry, was purchased and occupied by the University in 1929.
Below: Quarterback of the Bee's 1933 football squad.

Upper Left: Two middle-weights square off in the 1939 intramural boxing championship.
Upper Right: Charles Hall, aquired from the Baltimore Athletic Club in 1947.
Below Right: A little night study in the Howard Hall Library to get ready for exams.

Above: The University of Baltimore Glee Club of the '50's tunes up before rehearsal.
Right: The Mount Washington Campus was developed in 1952 for school athletics.
Below Left: Couples look out across the bow of the Port Welcome during a school outing.
Below Right: One of the many social events put on by the Cotillion Committee.

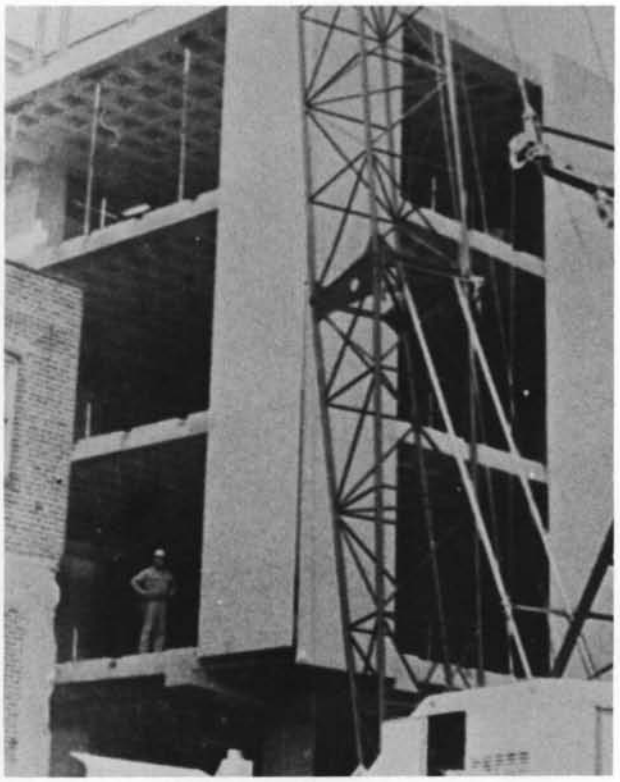

Above: In 1959 New Charles Hall was constructed on the corner of Charles and Oliver to give the rapidly expanding University more room.
Above Right: A bit of aquatic clowning on a spring picnic of the early '60's.
Right: U. of B. students "study" between classes.
Below: Members of KSK (the last of the school's social fraternities) hold a meeting of Alcoholics Unanimous.

Above Left: A student and his date twist the night away at the winter dance in 1962.
Above: Hair styles have changed a little since these whiffles.
Left: The sides go up on the $4 million Langsdale Library.
Below: The University of Baltimore Sports Car Club with a mint Corvette.
Bottom: Curtain call at the 1966 Variety Show.

Left: Students block Maryland Ave. During a 1969 protest over the lack of parking space.
Below Right: This ramp is just one of the many changes which have taken place as a result of the '74-'75 campaign to make the school accessible to handicapped persons.
Bottom: The award winning Academic Center.
